But which member of the Secretariat will dig all the bait?

The Mexican revolutionists appear to have studied the art of war under the late General Forrest—they never retreat, but always advance to the rear.

First steps are taken to disarm intelligent and patriotic lawyers who insist upon putting the Bill of Rights of the forefathers ahead of the Jones law of the Antislavery League.

Mr. Hoover seems to be carrying out the Coolidge policies—on a stretcher.

The Virginia lamb that was born with three bodies and eight legs and only one mouth to feed accomplishes the supreme achievement of coolidgeism. Every Vermont hillside should have a flock.

President Hoover interprets for the reporters and the flabbergasted dyes his campaign remarks and the speech of acceptance, to say nothing of the inaugural address, but who will interpret the interpretation?

It was Secretary Mellon, not President Hoover, who thought up the scheme to give publicity to refunded taxes, and the first thing Senator McKellar knows he's going to have a suit for plagiarism on his hands.

Speaking of real sport, the Congressional Club offers Mr. Hoover exclusive fishing privileges in its pond, where the bass are so smart they have been taught to act as caddies when a ball drops in.

Georgetown student nabbed for going to the Manor Club at 60 miles an hour is pinched again for coming back at 35. You've got to have a lot of pep nowadays to keep these parties from slowing you down.

Mr. Hoover's drastic oil order emphasizes the tremendous difference it makes whose ox is gored.

Merritt Chance is recommended for the post of chief of police, and something tells us that one end or the other of his name is going to decide this contest, and we're not betting on the front one, either.

It seems rather strange for the American spokesmen, or whatever they are, at Geneva, to be cordially assenting to the proposal that each of the British Dominions be represented on the World Court. It's a 6-to-1 shot the Senate will revive some of the old League of Nations debate on that point.

BANK THEFTS LAID TO INSURGENT HEADS

Revolutionary Army Falls Back to Jimenez, Deep in Chihuahua.

TOWN BAKER KILLED IN ESCALON BOMBING

Gen. Escobar Pledges Freedom of Press as Soon as His Armies Win Mexico.

(Associated Press.)

Without waiting for a new federal offensive to form, the rebel army commanded by Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, has fallen back from Escalon to Jimenez, deeper in the State of Chihuahua. Sympathizers in New York termed it "good rebel tactics," which was the same phrase used by Gen. Escobar to describe his earlier retreat from Torreon.

President Emilio Portes Gil, confident that the rebel withdrawal without battle is leading only to the United States border, declared that extradition of the insurgent leaders would be sought on the ground that they are "common criminals and bank robbers." The Mexican government also will seek to recover millions of pesos taken from government banks during brief occupation of central Mexico cities and said to be already in, or en route to, safe keeping for rebel exiles in the United States.

For the first time since the revolt broke out, more than a fortnight ago, the federal armies which have been operating as five distinct columns converging on Torreon after clearing of rebels the surrounding country, were united under the immediate leadership of Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former president and now secretary of war. The federalists declared that 30,000 troops of all branches were massed at Torreon and were organizing a further northward advance. As before, their airplanes preceded them and bombed rebel troop trains at Escalon.

Rebels Continue Northward. Headquarters, Gen. Escobar's Army, Jimenez, Chihuahua, March 19 (A.P.). The northward movement of the rebel army of Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar continued today. Trains which yesterday moved north from Torreon to Escalon reached Jimenez north of Escalon late today.

Escalon, Chihuahua, March 19 (A.P.). The white airplane which last Sunday bombed Torreon, today appeared over the revolutionist army trains here and dropped bombs. The trains escaped damage but one man in Escalon, the town's baker, was killed.

A small band of guerrillas, active in burning bridges on orders of Gen. Neyra, was encountered today by soldiers of Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, rebel commander, and three of them were brought here. They were treated as prisoners but were not harmed.

Preparations were made late today to move the army of Gen. Escobar to

RED KITTEN GIFT TO MRS. HOOVER

This little kitten is to be presented to Mrs. Herbert Hoover at noon today at the White House by Mrs. Robert E. Greene and Miss Annette H. McCarthy, president and secretary respectively of the Columbian Cat Fanciers. The kitten is red, and is expected to furnish lots of fun for Whoopee, the little dog which was presented to Mrs. Hoover some time ago.

POLICEMAN INDICTED UNDER NEW DRY LAW

Curtis Carter Among 8 Named by Grand Jury as Jones Act Violators.

TWO CLEARED IN COURT

Eight persons, one of them a suspended policeman, were charged with Jones liquor law violations in indictments returned by the grand jury yesterday to Chief Justice Walter J. McCoy in criminal division of the District Supreme Court. Five charges of liquor law violations, three covered by the Jones law, were filed in the Police Court.

The policeman indicted was Curtis Carter, 26 years old, of the Fifth Precinct. He was arrested after a motor race on Good Hope road southeast on March 11 by Policemen M. Chumyko of the Eleventh Precinct. Three men were in the liquor car, police charged, but two escaped. Carter was caught after abandoning the car and racing on foot, police said. The car is said to have contained 142 quarts of liquor.

An indictment against Gertrude Lloyd, colored, was based on information furnished by Clarence Harvey, colored, one of the two police "stoop pigeons" who were recently murdered. The others indicted were Frank Harper, colored; Raymond Hawkins, colored; Dodson, Morris Dally, Willie Purdie, colored; and Albert Coleman, colored. William L. Golden and Mary E. Gordon, both colored, of 807 Third street southeast, were charged with selling liquor in violation of the Jones law at Police Court. James O. Brown, of Navy place southeast, was also charged with sale of liquor. Their arraignments were postponed.

Alfred W. Beall, of Baltimore, Md., pleaded guilty to a charge of possessing liquor and was fined $250 by Judge Isaac R. Hitt. He was arrested for parking his automobile in a back yard at Eleventh and I streets northwest Monday night. Police found several bottles of alleged liquor in the car.

A charge of possession of a half-gallon of liquor was placed against Beatrice Jennings, colored, who pleaded not guilty, demanded a jury trial and was freed in $500 bail. She was arrested while riding a bicycle at Third street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest by Detectives Robert J. Barrett and F. Truscott, of the Fourth Precinct, who said she was carrying a half-gallon of liquor in a package.

After brief deliberation, a jury acquitted John W. Wilson, 33 years old, and Joseph Lockwood, 28, of sale and possession of liquor charges before Storm clouds are gathering in the Senate over the new formula for American adherence to the World Court, and Senate ratification is necessary before it can become operative.

The proposal was worked out at Geneva by Elihu Root to bring about an understanding between the world powers on the Senate's controversial reservation respecting advisory opinions by the court.

There was no official or public comment here yesterday on the text of the modified Root formula made public Monday night at Geneva through the Associated Press, but there were some private expressions of concern over the final wording of the proposal.

Expressions of discontent were heard from sources unfriendly to the first instance to American entry into the court and these could not be discounted completely as no approval of the Root plan was voiced by friends of American adherence to the court.

At the State Department it was reported that this Government was fully informed on the course of events at Geneva. This was taken to mean that Mr. Root's plan had been presented to this Government before its final adoption by the commission of international jurists which is engaged in revising the court's rules.

Previously the department had been in communication with Senators Swanson, of Virginia, and Walsh, of Montana, both Democrats, who originally sponsored the Senate reservation. Neither of these senators was available last night for an expression on the final form of Mr. Root's modification of that reservation.

It was the opinion of one of the Senate leaders in foreign affairs yesterday, after a cursory reading of the Committee Is Deadlocked as "Six-Votes-to-One" Point Is Revived.

PLEA ON BENCH VOICE IS SUPPORTED BY U. S.

Small Members Charge Favoritism if Plan Is Sanctioned.

ARGUMENT OF HURST GIVEN LITTLE FAVOR

Elihu Root, Who Is Honored by Body for Protocol Plan, Backs England.

(Associated Press.)

General March 19 (N.Y.W.N.S.). The ghost of "six votes to one" for Great Britain stalked in Geneva again today when Sir Cecil Hurst, British member of the League's judicial committee, sought to reopen the question of the eligibility of the dominions to be represented on the bench of the World Court.

This time it was the United States which supported the contention that the dominions—especially Canada—would be entitled to representation on the court when questions of special interest to them were under discussion. And it was small League members who warned that such favoritism to a "member of the British empire" would be decidedly displeasing to certain states.

Following a lengthy and considerably heated discussion, the committee decided that it was unable to reach an agreement, so to give the desired interpretation would be to exceed its authority. However, as a concession to the British, it was agreed the discussion should not be construed as prejudicing the present situation.

Hurst Cites Constitution. Although presumably disposed of last week when the committee decided against interpreting the court's statutes as meaning that the dominions were entitled to claim representation through judges of their nationality, when questions concerning them were being discussed, Sir Cecil Hurst today again argued that both the constitution of the court and the statutes and the statutes of the court leave no room for doubt that the dominions reserved this right. He asserted that the presence of a British judge on the court's bench did not prejudice their prerogatives.

Nicholas Politis, of Greece, led the opposition, expressing fear that a dominion judge might duplicate the work of the British judge. He pointed out that a situation might possibly exist where British Empire domination of the bench would result. Politis even warned that if the dominions were allowed judges and others deprived of the same right, Greece and other court members "might consider it as a reason for not acceding to the optional clause of the statute concerning compulsory jurisdiction."

Root Intervenes.

Elihu Root, intervening briefly in the debate, pointed out that the United States has recognized the dominions which are league members, especially Canada and Ireland, "as separate international personalities" and has exchanged diplomatic representatives with them.

Almost without exception the committee members turned thumbs down on Sir Cecil Hurst's measure, which presumably was intended to pave the way for a Canadian judge on the bench of the World Court.

Also, when the committee learned this afternoon that the incident had become known to newspaper men, members of the league's information section responsible for divulging the details of the secret debate were called upon the carpet.

Forger's Pen Opens Doors Of Jail; Puts Him in Again

Master of Art, Unable to Resist Lure of "Racket," Runs Afoul of Postal Agents and Is Rearrested; Second Convict, Who Left at Same Time, Still at Liberty.

Kansas City, March 19 (A.P.).—Hays Van Gorder, master forger, who obtained his release from the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans., by forging court orders, was behind the bars again tonight, but a fellow convict, C. Von Esch, of St. Louis, who gained his freedom on the fake orders, had not been apprehended. Von Esch was serving a sentence for violation of the Dyer act.

The lure of his "racket" was too strong for Van Gorder and the astounding story of how the notorious criminal duped prison officials was revealed here with the announcement by postal officials that Van Gorder had been recaptured at Milan, Mo., while plying his old game of passing forged money orders.

Postal inspectors tonight announced that Von Esch walked from the prison with Van Gorder.

Warden Thomas B. White during whose absence on a trip to Washington the men effected their strange escape March 2, refused to discuss the affair, except to admit that an investigation was underway. He said Department of Justice rules prohibited him from giving out information concerning Federal prisoners.

Van Gorder, 33, who says he is a graduate of Minnesota University in 1908 and a former school teacher in that State and Wisconsin, denied the forgery tonight.

"All I know is that I was called into the office and released," he asserted. He also denied making a similar attempt to escape eight years ago, said to have been frustrated by officials at the prison's very threshold.

Van Gorder forged the order that won him freedom, had it delivered into the hands of prison officials through channels that appeared to stamp it as regular, and walked away to continue his operations with only the prison officials aware that he was not safely locked up.

A flood of bogus money orders appeared in Middlewestern States and postal inspectors got busy. The trail led to Milan, Mo., where a suspect was arrested and identified as Van Gorder. Postal authorities couldn't believe it, as they were confident that Van Gorder was serving at Leavenworth. But investigation proved the prisoner was the notorious forger. Van Gorder was brought here and an inquiry started at the prison which revealed the forged court order.

The convict gained his freedom several weeks ago. He had failed once

Byrd Rescues Two Lost in Ice Wastes

Balchen and Two Others Found After Gale Wrecks Plane in Antarctic.

New York, March 19 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Comdr. Richard E. Byrd today found the three men of his party who have been lost since Thursday in the mountains of the Rockefeller range, according to a copyrighted dispatch from Little America, Antarctica, to the New York Times Co. and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He was accompanied on his flight to the lost men by Malcolm Hanson, radio operator. He found the trio safe and well despite hours of battling against terrific storms.

The rescue plane returned to the base with two of the men who had been lost—Berni Balchen and Harold Gurnea. Comdr. Byrd and Hanson remained with the third member of the lost party—Larry Gould—until another flight can be made to bring them back to Little America. A 120-mile-an-hour wind wrecked the plane in which Balchen, Gurnea and Gould had flown to the mountains. It tore the plane from the snow and from the lines by which it was anchored, carried it off a mile, and dropped it on the glacial ice, a splintered wreck. That was why no word had been received from the marooned men since Thursday.

Caryville and Milligan, along the Yellow River in Ecuador, were not hit. Only three houses were reported left in Milligan and they were damaged.

Death of Widow in Burned Car Is Mystery to Police

Lodger in House of New Orleans Woman Tells of Seeing Strange Man in Auto With Her as It Left Garage Early in Morning.

New Orleans, La., March 19 (A.P.). Police tonight said they were inclined to believe that the death of Mrs. Janet Baker, 54-year-old widow of Colin M. Baker, whose charred body was found early today in her burned automobile in Audubon Park, was an accident. Both the police and the coroner, however, were pursuing all leads that might develop evidence of murder or suicide.

They were investigating reports that a man and a woman, or a lone man, had been seen in the car with Mrs. Baker.

The accident theory was given weight by statements of members of the family that she frequently drove to church early in the morning and if too early would drive through the park. Her old machine, the police pointed out, might have developed a short circuit and burst into flames inside the sedan too quickly for her to escape. In the excitement, they said, she might have pulled the emergency brake.

If the story of a lodger in Mrs. Baker's fashionable boarding house, H. C. Spaulding, can be eliminated the police were ready to mark the case "accident."

"I live in the room immediately over the garage and my first thought last night was that some one might be trying to steal Mrs. Baker's machine," he said. "I ran to the window and saw the automobile backing out of the garage. I could see that a woman was at the wheel, so I was sure that it was Mrs. Baker. However, the car stopped on the street after backing out of the garage and I saw a man, dressed in a blue suit, gray topcoat and light gray hat walk around the left side of the car, open the door and take the driver's seat. Through the back window I could see the woman, who I thought was Mrs. Baker, move to the right side of the front seat to permit the man to take the wheel."

Mrs. Baker was never seen after this until a blazing automobile was discovered in the park opposite the home of Dorothy Dix, newspaper columnist. Mrs. E. M. Gilmer, newspaper columnist. The body was so badly burned it gave no clue, nor did the gutted automobile.

This morning Mrs. Baker's bed indicated it had not been slept in but the maid explained that one time Mrs. Baker made her own bed.

The Baker family was prominent in New Orleans.

Mrs. Baker's husband was a brother of one of the publishers of the New Orleans Times-Picayune. She was the mother of Marion M. Baker, manager of a branch bank. Mrs. M. Baker, business man of Memphis, and Mrs. C. H. Huey, of Houston.

Turned tonight after having arranged a method for election by the United States to the World Court of Justice and having revised the court statutes. He was hailed as "the spiritual father of the World Court" and as the "deus ex machina" who had unerringly led the nations out of the wilderness and pointed to a way of securing American collaboration with the great Hague tribunal of justice and peace.

Signor Dionisio Anselotti, of Italy, a judge of the World Court, amid most respectful silence of his colleagues, paid tribute to the veteran American statesman as the spiritual father of the court and as the man who in 1920 has solved the perplexing problem of American membership just as in 1920, in framing the statutes of the court, he solved the question of how to elect judges in a manner which would not wound the sensibilities of either great or small powers.

Protocol Is Passed.

Referring to the protocol for American adhesion, Chairman W. J. M. van Kyndt, of the Netherlands, proclaimed the satisfaction felt that it was now possible to foresee the United States taking another great step in international collaboration. He said that the world was so long accustomed to see the United States in the foremost ranks of all those struggling for better international organizations that it was only natural that great disappointment was felt when several years ago a gulf seemed to have opened on the court question between the United States and "certain efforts of other nations." There was good will on both sides, but it was difficult to effect cooperation between the United States of America and the United States of the League of Nations.

"There were souls on each side of the Atlantic," continued the chairman, "and then a silence for two years, which many pessimists predicted would be limitless."

"Fortunately the deus ex machina came in the person of Mr. Root, and the deepest admiration and most sincere thanks. He has shown that he not only deserves well of his country, but also of mankind."

Mr. Root was greatly affected by these and other tributes of his colleagues. He plans to motor to Paris Friday and to sail for home on the liner Ile de France April 10.

BATTLE IS LIKELY OVER COURT SCHEME

published report of the Root plan, that it modified considerably the Senate's reservation.

Likewise there was an inclination at the Capitol to have the Senate defer consideration of modified reservation until the regular session in October. Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee prefers not to take up the Root plan until the fall session, and the other nations adhering to the court had indicated their official approval of the proposition.

In voting adherence to the court three years ago, the Senate adopted several reservations. All of these except one have been declined to approve the reservation stipulating that the court should not render an advisory opinion on a case in which the United States has or claims to have an interest, without the consent of this Government.

Mr. Root has been busy at Geneva for the last month trying to work out a formula on that point acceptable to this Government and other nations. Before undertaking his mission he conferred with Senators Borah, Walsh and Swanson.

There was a strong fight against American adherence to the court in the Senate three years ago. Leaders admit that if another controversy develops on acceptance of a modification of the reservation that the way for American entry into the court may finally be closed.

Dead Man Behind Bar

Of Cicero Murder Case

Chicago, Ill., March 19 (A.P.).—The beer was checked off another casualty today. Behind the bar of a Chicago saloon, the one-time Madigan's cafe that was the scene of the machine gun assassination of Assistant State's Attorney William McGarrigle and two companions, the police found the body of a man today, shot through with bullets.

The roadhouse now is said to be operated by William "Klondike" O'Donnell, one of the top flight of Chicago boot-runners. Chicago police said nothing but county highway officers who discovered the body immediately decided the slaying was a new outbreak of the feud between O'Donnell's gang and his rivals.

U. S. Diamonds Worth $4,000,000,000, Report

New York, March 19 (A.P.).—Diamonds owned in the United States are valued at $4,000,000,000, the Continental Insurance Co. has found.

The per capita value of the country's holdings is greater than that of any other country. Few of the world's largest diamonds are owned in this country.

TWO FISHING PLACES CHOSEN FOR HOOVER

May Spend Week-Ends at Retreats in Virginia and Maryland.

STREAMS WELL STOCKED

Two nearby fishing retreats have been selected by White House officials for President Hoover's week-ends, or any other time he may find time to use them.

One spot approved is in Madison County, Va., near the headwaters of the Rapidan River. This is to be the official presidential retreat.

In addition, Lawrence A. Richey, one of the President's secretaries, has acquired a 1,500-acre tract at Catootin Furnace, Md., in the Blue Ridge Mountains. This is Richey's personal acquisition, but the President will, of course, find it available whenever he wants it.

The place in Virginia is about 100 miles distant, or a three-hour automobile ride. Plans have been approved by Madison County officials for a $14,000 link of new road from Madison County House to the proposed site. It is near Griggsville.

A fishing lodge is to be erected and the place otherwise made available for the President. The State of Virginia, Madison County and the National Parks Commission will share the expense necessary for the erection of the lodge and other appointments.

The Rapidan Mountain stream is to be stocked with thousands of trout. Horace Albright, director of National Parks, and Henry O'Malley, United States Commissioner of Fisheries, brought the place to the attention of the President, and after an inspection by Richey, it was approved.

William E. Carson, chairman of the Virginia Conservation Commission, has undertaken supervision of plans for the new roads and lodge.

Prefers Old-Fashioned Place.

It was explained that Mr. Hoover prefers an old-fashioned fishing lodge to the recreation White House at Mount Weather, Va., that was proposed. In using the Madison County place, too, he will not have to use any of the $48,000 appropriation provided by Congress for a retreat. No Federal appropriation will be necessary for the fishing lodge.

Richey is an inveterate fisherman himself, and it was primarily for his own use that he bought the tract in Madison County. It was purchased from Lancelot Jacques sr. At one time it was owned by Thomas Johnson, first governor of Maryland. Cannon balls were manufactured there during the Revolutionary War. A portion of the original manor house erected in 1761, forms a part of the present home. Schwab, Walk and Canby, Washington real estate dealers, acted for Mr. Richey.

Best Trout Stream in That Section.

The renowned Hunting Creek, declared by Fish and Game Commissioner O'Malley to be the best trout stream in the eastern section of the country, flows through the State.

The Virginia stream, according to O'Malley, is ideal for brown, brook and rainbow trout. There are feeding streams which will form fine propagation grounds where the trout may reach a size of five or six inches before being turned into the main stream.

The reservation covers 18 miles of the Rapidan River which winds between two mountain ranges in a thick wooded valley, several yards wide in some places and three-quarters of a mile in others.

Heflin Denied Another City Hall for Address

Bangor, Me., March 19 (A.P.).—A second Maine city today denied the use of its city hall for an address by United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin.

Application of Bangor Klansmen for the use of the building for a proposed lecture by the Alabama was refused by the Bangor City Council. Heflin is in accordance with a ten-year-old policy prohibiting the use of city property for a purpose likely to arouse sectarian or race feeling.

The Portland city council last night denied a similar request.

Antiforeign Feeling Increases at Nanking

Shanghai, March 19 (U.P.).—Antiforeignism was reported increasing in Nanking today. Foreign women and children are arriving here daily, saying they were advised to leave the city.

The British cruiser Serwick has been ordered there. Two other gunboats are awaiting orders.

FISHING PRESERVE FOR HOOVER

Hoover Is Invited to Fish In Club Pond Near Capital

Directors of Congressional Country Institution Vote to Ask President to Try for Bass; Also Promise to Clear Course if He Cares to Play Golf.

President Hoover does not have to motor 100 miles into the interior of the State of Virginia or go to any other remote place to fish. He can fish at the Congressional Country Club.

This fact was brought out last night when the club's board of directors in regular session voted to invite the Chief Executive to visit the club and catch some bass.

The invitation will specify that the club's fish pond is inhabited by approximately 4,000 good-sized bass.

The board also will invite the President to come out and play golf, promising that when he does the course will be cleared for him.

Von Tirpitz Feted As He Reaches 80

Grand Old Man of German Wartime Navy Sees Nation's Resurgence.

Feldafing, Bavaria, March 19 (A.P.).—Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz today was hailed as the grand old man of the former imperial navy on his eightieth birthday by scores of patriotic delegations and by prominent personages throughout the country.

The octogenarian admiral was in fine fettle as he stood for hours listening to congratulatory and complimentary speeches in which his merits as commander and statesman were extolled.

A grand dinner of 50 courses was served, to which the admiral responded. Although 80, he was still fresh enough to expect to see the dawn of a German resurgence.

Besides his family and son-in-law, Ulrich von Hassell, German Minister to Copenhagen, the guests included Vice Admiral von Trotha and former Ministers von Keudell and Waltraff. Among the presents were a bust of the grand selector of Brandenburg, creator of the German navy, and a silver service from the National party. The congratulations included a cordial message from the former Kaiser and crown prince.

Lawyers Plan to Back Hoover's Dry Program

At a meeting tonight at the Interior Department Building, the Federal Bar Association is scheduled to pass a resolution pledging support to President Hoover in law enforcement and in the drying out of New York lawyers in offering advice as to how to evade the Jones law.

The Federal Bar Association is composed of attorneys who are employed by the Government.

Supporter of Trotsky Is Banished to Siberia

Berlin, March 19 (A.P.).—Dispatches of the Telegram Union from Moscow by way of Kovno report that a Trotsky follower named Martindoff, who as an old Marxist played a notable part in the Russian revolution, has been banished for five years to Yeniseisk, East Siberia.

The state printing works have been ordered to discontinue printing books written by Leon Trotsky during his exile at Alma Ata and all towns must rename by April 1 streets named for the former war commissar.

Nicaraguan Congress Approves Air Contract

Managua, Nicaragua, March 19 (A.P.).—A mail contract with the Pan-American Airways was approved by both houses of congress today and is now awaiting the signature of President Jose Moncada.

The service is expected to reduce the mail time between the United States and Nicaragua from 20 days to 4.

Great Artificial Fireflies As House Lamps Predicted

Scientist Predicts Synthetic Living Light Creatures, Immortal and Independent of Outside Aid; 40 Animal Groups Endowed With Luminescence Exist.

New York, March 19 (N.Y.W.S.).—Artificial fireflies as big as pocket watches will be used in libraries or living rooms in place of electric lamps were suggested tonight by the address on "Living Light" before the American Institute in Cooper Union by Dr. Hewton Harvey, professor of psychology at Princeton University.

"Prof. Harvey thinks the time will come when our lamps will live and be quite independent of wires or electric meters with their attendant monthly bills. The lamps he foresees would live and would incidentally be immortal, recreating themselves from their ashes like the Phoenix of old."

And whereas the fiery of nature only flashes, burning up the tiny amount of "oil" in its lamp and then staying dark again until it has reformed its "oil," the robot firefly would create new "oil" which is technically called "luciferin," while it was burning the rest, this being an incessant process.

"Chemically," said Prof. Harvey, "luciferin is probably to be placed among the simplest members of the proteins, the peptides or proteoses, and the question as to whether we shall ever be able to reproduce living light because of the impossibility of being able to synthesize the proteins. Personally, I think that will come in the future. We now synthesize fats, sugars and some of the polypeptides, which are simple proteins."

"It is only a matter of time for synthetic luciferin to be a member," Prof. Harvey, who has made a study of all those animals which are endowed with luminescence, employed as search lights as lures and as sex attractions, said he had found 40 groups of the animal kingdom in which two groups of plants to be luminescent.

TAMMANY DISTRICT HEADS CALL CAUCUS

Fifteen Leaders, Controlling 9 of 23 Votes, Demand Chief From Ranks.

3 WALKER MEN FAVORED

New York, March 19 (A.P.).—Fifteen of the 35 district leaders of Tammany Hall met today and issued an ultimatum that a district leader must be selected to succeed to the post of leader left vacant by the resignation of George W. Olvany.

They also decided to call a caucus to meet at the hall Thursday afternoon to decide upon the leader they will vote for at the meeting of the executive committee Friday.

The conference was held in the office of County Clerk Thomas M. Farley, who has been prominently mentioned for the post. The 15 men who attended have 9 of the 23 votes in the executive committee, which will choose the new leader.

Mr. Farley, who acted as spokesman for the group, said three candidates had been discussed at the meeting: John F. Curry, co-leader of the Fifth Assembly District and commissioner of records; Martin G. McCue, clerk of the surrogate's court and close friend of Surrogate James A. Foley; and Michael J. Cruise, co-leader of the Twelfth Assembly District. All are considered friendly to Mayor James J. Walker, to whom the selection of leader means much with a majority campaign approaching, in which he again hopes to be the Tammany candidate. All three mentioned as leader were present at the conference.

Mr. Farley, who was appointed to his present official post by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and who also is friendly with Mayor Walker, said he was not a candidate. Political observers believe the choice lies between Curry and McCue. The former held a conference with Mayor Walker at city hall today and unofficial circles said he had the mayor's support for the leadership.

McCue, however, was said to be favored by many because of his close association and long friendship with Surrogate Foley and Senator Robert F. Wagner. McCue's supporters point out that if elected he probably would con-

JUDGE HARDY HELD FOR TRIAL, 37 TO 0

Senate of California Charges Misdemeanors by Aid to Aimee McPherson.

SPLIT ON TICKET ARTICLE

Sacramento, Calif., March 19 (A.P.).—The State senate, sitting in a high court of impeachment, overruled today the first four counts of the demurrer Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy, of Los Angeles, filed against the articles of impeachment charging him with misdemeanors in office.

Through its action, the senate holds Judge Hardy for trial. The vote was 37 to 0 on the first four articles charging Judge Hardy with misdemeanors in office in connection with the affairs of Mrs. Aimee McPherson, evangelist.

The senators split, 20 to 14, on the fifth article, sustaining the Los Angeles judge's objections to the charge of misconduct for the alleged distribution of seat checks at the William Edward Hickman murder trial in Los Angeles.

H. L. Carnahan, presiding officer of the court, ordered Judge Hardy held for trial on the first four articles.

Judge Hardy, when asked to enter his plea, rose and declared himself "not guilty to all of the allegations."

The principal charge against the judge is that he received a fee from Mrs. McPherson in payment for his activities in her behalf, when her story of being kidnapped was under investigation by a Los Angeles grand jury. Both Judge Hardy and Mrs. McPherson have denied that a $2,500 check given the jurist by her was for legal services.

Mr. Farley and Senator Wagner on important questions of policy, thus giving the hall the benefit of their long political experience.

Most of those attending hurried away after the conference, declining to discuss what had taken place. Mr. Curry and Mr. Farley, however, stayed behind and had their pictures taken together, both smiling broadly. When asked for a statement, Mr. Curry said he believed Mr. Farley had covered the ground and did not care to add anything.

U.S. WILL NOT DENY REFUGE FOR REBELS

Sanctuary to Be Granted in Line With Proposed Pan-American Pact.

INCOMES TO BE WATCHED

(Associated Press.)

The administration made known yesterday that there will be no change in the policy of granting Mexican revolutionaries a sanctuary in the United States.

In accordance with the regulations under which sanctuary is granted, this will amount to detention of the rebels and will carry out under law and precedent what is actually written into the Pan American treaty on rights and duties of States in the event of civil strife.

It was considered impossible to predicate the American policy directly upon this treaty because it has not yet been ratified by the Senate. It had been indicated right along that the administration was desirous of carrying out the spirit of this treaty, although it is not in effect. It is expected that at the same time immigration officials will be directed to strictly observe the laws concerning incomes.

Under the practice of granting sanctuary, this Government will provide a place of refuge for any rebels coming into the country. The rebels would be detained and it is presumed that the proper authorities would exercise vigilance to see that all persons granted sanctuary in no way violate the laws of the United States. Were any of the rebels found to be conspiring on American soil, the constituted government at Mexico City, they could be arrested and held.

Whether any great number of rebels will be forced northward into the United States by the advancing federal troops remains to be seen. In the event of a rebel rout, desertions from the ranks might take place and cause only officers of the higher grades to escape punishment by attempting to seek asylum in this country. The administration understands that the rebel army in Chihuahua where the principal engagements are looked for numbers only 8,000 men as against 18,000 federal troops under Gen. Calles. Such a difference in number is held by some American officials to indicate an early termination of the struggle on the deserts of eastern Chihuahua.

CARTER INDICTED UNDER JONES ACT

Judge John P. McMahon yesterday in Police Court.

Lewis Wehrle, undercover policeman, who declared he made a "buy" from the defendants at 1303 H street northwest which resulted in a raid, stated that prior to joining the police force last December he never had tasted liquor. Since becoming a policeman, he said, he has been forced to consume large quantities of intoxicants in connection with the police duties.

The raid was conducted on January 18 by Sgt. O. J. Letterman's vice squad. The defense, conducted by Attorney Harry T. Whelan, introduced testimony tending to show that Wehrle was refused when he sought to purchase liquor and was just completing arrangements to make a "buy" with snatched money through a man in the establishment when the raiders entered.

REBELS RETREAT NORTHWARD; CALLES UNITES ARMY OF 30,000

Jimenez, where it was expected the troops will remain for several days. Several troop trains have left for the north ahead of Gen. Escobar's train.

A band of regional troops which have reported to Gen. Escobar numbers at least 5,000 men, well equipped, it is reported.

15 Federalists Killed.

Juarez, Chihuahua, Mex., March 19 (A.P.).—Fifteen federalists, said to have been a guerrilla band recruited in El Paso, were killed in a brief battle today when they were surprised by rebel troops near Ojinaga. It was learned here tonight. The fifteen men were said to have constituted the entire band.

Juarez, Chihuahua, March 19 (A.P.).—Gen. Marcelo Caraveo, governor of Chihuahua, today said peace overtures to end the Mexican revolt are not contemplated by revolutionary leaders. He denied reports from El Paso and Mexico City that he sought negotiations for peace.

Conditions in north central Mexico today generally were quiet. A passenger train arrived from Torreon after a slow, arduous journey delayed by repair work on bridges which had been burned by federalists. The train was accompanied by two rebel troop trains, one proceeding ahead as a pilot train while the second formed a rear guard. Damage to the bridges was small and the trains were repaired after a few hours, passengers said.

Air raids on Torreon Sunday were described by some of the travelers who asked that their names be withheld. Between 10 a. m. and noon, they said, four federal planes appeared over the city circling the military trains and camp and dropping bombs. No damage was done at either site.

The airmen also dropped two bombs in the plaza, one injuring a man seated on a bench. The most serious damage was done to a one-story building occupied by an electric light fixture company in Valdes Carrillo street. Another bomb exploded in Morelos street. Several machine-gun bullets struck the Hotel Iberia, hitting doors and windows.

Barring of Press Explained.

Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, rebel commander in chief, issued a statement in this country. The statement declared that he was withholding the rebel army in Chihuahua where the principal engagements are looked for numbers only 8,000 men as against 18,000 federal troops under Gen. Calles. Such a difference in number is held by some American officials to indicate an early termination of the struggle on the deserts of eastern Chihuahua.

Calles Enters Torreon.

Mexico City, March 19 (A.P.).—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, secretary of war and generalissimo of the federal armies in the field, entered Torreon at 6 o'clock tonight. He began preparations to lead his forces in northward pursuit of the fleeing rebel general, Gonzalo Escobar, now at Escalon.

His entry into the former rebel stronghold came just 24 hours after the first of his columns had occupied it. The generalissimo is now for the first time at the direct head of all of the great army dedicated to the pursuit and extermination of the present rebellion.

While the forces directly under Gen. Calles have been pushing on to Torreon from the vicinity of Durango for a week, it was the fortune of war for other generals under his direction to reach the objective first. Gen. Almazan, Zedillo and Cardenas led three columns of the federal army into Torreon on Monday night and the commander in chief brought in a fourth today.

The entry of Gen. Calles was exactly on the schedule laid out for the repair of railroad tracks between Durango and Torreon. The federal forces now concentrated in that late rebel stronghold were understood to number about 30,000 troops, including infantry, artillery, cavalry and aviation units. It is the largest army mobilized in Mexico in fifteen years and it is now massed under a single leader with a single objective.

President Emilio Portes Gil today told American newspaper men that the government was considering seeking extradition of rebel leaders who may flee into the United States on the ground that they are not political refugees but "common criminals who have fled to the United States after robbing banks in Mexico."

The president declared that the government would also seek to have attached and returned to Mexico "the money stolen by rebel leaders" from banks in the cities of Monterey, Saltillo, Durango and Torreon. This loot was said to total from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 pesos from the branches of the Banco de Mexico alone.

The Government views the revolution as having become wholesale banditry with little prospect of fighting and with the rebel leaders principally concerned with escaping to the United States with money taken from occupied cities.

Portes Gil today said, "It seems improbable that the rebels will attempt a real fight anywhere, but if they do it will be unimportant and futile. The revolution now is a question of chasing the fleeing rebels and rebuilding the railroad tracks that they destroy as they retreat. It may require a month to repair all railroad tracks and to catch all rebels."

"In that sense, the revolution may last a month longer, but it has already ceased to have any other importance."

Torreon Banks Looted.

The government was informed tonight that Gen. Escobar looted the Torreon banks of 1,023,000 pesos. Gen. Calles also reported that the insurgents carried off large quantities of merchandise, which the Communiqué declared proved once more the "immorality and infamy of the rebels."

In their haste to evacuate Torreon the insurgents left behind 11 railway cars loaded with merchandise, 29 cars containing railway repair material and 14 locomotives.

On his arrival by automobile, Gen. Calles greeted citizens, committees of political parties and the generals who had preceded him in the occupation. He announced that he would proceed immediately to restore business to normal and repair communications, as well as to prepare for the immediate northward pursuit of the rebels.

Battle of Words Prevails.

Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, March 19 (A.P.).—Words rather than deeds today continued to chart developments of the Mexican revolution in the northwest, with the border and Mazatlan sectors quiet.

Gov. Fausto Topete, revolutionary leader here, minced no words in denying reports that peace overtures were under way. He said if Gov. Alvarado Rodriguez, federal commander in chief of the northwest and governor of Baja California, who is reported to be conducting peace overtures at Nogales, Ariz., across the line from here, were to come into Sonora he would be executed.

Rebel leaders here continued to assert that Naco, Sonora, federal border stronghold, would be attacked "when the time is ripe." No change in troop movements was reported.

Federal forces at Naco, well entrenched, were prepared to resist attack which was momentarily expected, it was announced there by Gen. Augustino Olachea, federal commander.

Gen. Enrique Estrada, with rebel cavalry forces, was reported still encamped at Cananea, Sonora, about 30 miles south of Naco, awaiting orders to attack the border town.

AMERICAN CAPTIVE OF MEXICAN BAND

T. L. Carnahan Second Citizen of U. S. Now Held by Outlaw Group.

MINE FORCED TO CLOSE

Mexico City, March 19 (A.P.).—The American Embassy was informed by private sources that an American mining man, T. L. Carnahan, was kidnapped last night at La Noria Mine, near the town of San Benito, Zacatecas. At the same time the bandits carried off a Mexican mine official, Dr. Olivera, and presumably were holding both for ransom.

Information received by other mining companies here said that the La Noria mine had suspended operations, leaving 1,000 men without work, pending guarantees of safety of the other employees against outlaw raids.

Carnahan was said to maintain headquarters at El Paso, Tex., and has a brother, George Carnahan, of the Continental Rubber Co. in New York City. The seizure of Carnahan makes two American prisoners of outlaw bands. On March 1 Henry Hanson, American resident manager of the San Nicholas Mining & Milling Co. at Vocas, Durango, and J. W. Reid, an employee who is a British subject, were captured and have not yet been released. The United States made representations to the Mexican government in the case.

The week before this two American mining men, J. M. Underwood and C. C. Alesthorpe, were executed by their captors in Guanajuato while federal forces were attempting to force their release.

El Paso, Tex., March 19 (A.P.).—T. L. Carnahan, mining engineer said to have been kidnapped by Mexican bandits, leaving here for Mexico when he became interested in the properties of Mexico Mines, Inc. The manager of the company, George F. Kinney, left El Paso last Friday to join Carnahan. Carnahan paid a visit to El Paso recently and left the city only two weeks ago to return to mining operations.

Woman Injured in Row.

Mrs. Susie Malloy, 35 years old, of 526 Fifth street southeast, was at Casualty Hospital last night, following an altercation in her home in which she was struck on the head. Police said the woman was hit by Mrs. Rebecca Hubbard, a boarder, following an argument in connection with the feeding of the latter's child. Mrs. Malloy has lacerations of the scalp, and physicians fear she has a fracture of the skull.

Absolute Divorce Won by Langford

Owner of Penny Amusement Parlor, 66, Charged His Wife, 26, in Suit.

Sidney Walter Langford, 66 years old, wealthy operator of the penny amusement parlor at 64 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was awarded an absolute divorce from his pretty 26-year-old wife, Mrs. Marie Boham Langford, by Justice Jennings Bailey in the District Supreme Court yesterday on grounds of misconduct.

They were married in 1926 as the result of a letter written by the woman from her home in Dulburg-on-the-Rhine, Germany, which was published in a local newspaper and in which the young woman expressed her desire to acquire an American husband.

In July of 1927 the young woman instituted suit for limited divorce, declaring her husband had deserted her. Deputy marshals, attempting to serve notice of the suit on Langford, were forced to run him a foot race through the downtown section of the city before making service. Langford filed a cross-bill for absolute divorce to the suit, but the court dismissed his charges and he was forced to pay his wife alimony. A short time later Langford filed the cross-bill charging misconduct.

Family of 8 Uninjured As Bomb Wrecks Shop

Gary, Ind., March 19 (A.P.).—A gun-cotton bomb exploded early today in a new apartment district, wrecking the front of two stores and blowing the glass from several large flat buildings. The estimated damage was $15,000.

The bomb was placed in the doorway of a dry goods store owned by William Herman. The front of that building and of the adjoining structure, occupied by Stojson Bros., was wrecked. Herman, his wife and six children, living above the store, were shaken, but not otherwise injured.

MITCHELL DEFENDS SNOOK DISMISSAL

Letter to Warden Says New Administration Paves Way for Changes.

SPY SYSTEM IS STUDIED

(United Press.)

The requested resignation of Warden John Snook, of Atlanta Federal Prison, was defended by Attorney General Mitchell yesterday on the ground that "a change is necessary in the public interest."

The correspondence leading to Snook's resignation, which was received yesterday and accepted to take effect April 1, was made public by Mitchell, who assumed full responsibility for the department's action in the case.

Snook, Mitchell said, has been granted a leave of absence, to take effect whenever the warden desires. Until a new warden is appointed the prison will be managed by Deputy Warden Arthur C. Aderhole, Mitchell said.

In a two-line letter dated March 7 and signed by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General, Snook was asked to submit his resignation. He replied by asking Mitchell to give the reasons for the department's request.

Says Careful Review Given.

Replying to Snook's letter, Mitchell advised him that the request for his resignation was sent at the Attorney General's request after a careful review of material in the department's files relating to administration of the prison.

"Upon a change of administration which has just occurred," Mitchell said in his letter, "I feel free to exercise my best judgment in such matters and make such changes in the administration as conditions seem to require."

Mitchell's letter added that the 30-day period specified in the letter asking Snook's resignation was "to give you as long a time as the public interest would permit to arrange the removal of yourself and family from the institution and in order not to be more peremptory than the conditions would make necessary. If you do not wish that period of time I would be glad to have your resignation effective at an earlier date."

Snook "Heartily Agreed."

The correspondence then closed when a letter from Snook was received yesterday in which he submitted his resignation, which, he suggested, take effect April 1 and asked a leave of absence. Snook said he "heartily agreed" with Mitchell that as head of the Federal prison system he should feel free to make whatever changes he considered necessary.

"You should have the privilege of placing as head of the different institutions men of your own selection, whose ideas of penology and prison administration coincide with yours," Snook added.

Mitchell said today the Justice Department is investigating the undercover system to which Snook objected prior to his resignation, but he would not say whether that plan of obtaining information will be abandoned.

The property has been kept in hiding by heirs of Mrs. Remus, the plaintiff alleged. The order provides that the estate produce the property, which includes according to Remus, many valuable paintings and a rare signature of George Washington.

all law violations. And in this policy he assumes he has the support of all decent people of the country.

Sees Vast Difference.

There is a vast difference in this attitude and the great prohibition crusader that he has been frequently pictured. The latter pose arouses the fighting spirit of the wet, all citizens of the country, as is evidenced by the action of prominent lawyers in New York in banding together to educate juries not to convict under the Jones

Briefly, his attitude is that he wants the public to quit linking his name with prohibition or with prohibition enforcement. Link it with the enforcement of all laws as much as you wish. It will probably never be known as to just what he thinks of the merits of the present prohibition laws. He has said that he considers prohibition a "noble experiment," but as to what he thinks about the present laws designed to bring prohibition about is another thing.

He steadily refrains from being drawn into any discussion of the merits of the laws. Dr. A. J. Barton, head of the Southern Baptist Convention, and foremost among the dries, talked with him the other day and afterwards said they had had a very frank discussion, but he went out of his way to say that the merits of the prohibition laws had not been discussed.

Doran Shares Views.

There was the feeling at the time that perhaps Dr. Barton had sought to bring up the merits and had been informed that Mr. Hoover did not want to talk on this subject.

Mr. Hoover's view about the enforcement of prohibition laws is shared by the present enforcement generalissimo, Dr. James M. Doran. He has made it plain, in the midst of the spectacular prohibition talk, that even with the increased funds given to him, he plans to do nothing more than pound steadily away, with additional men, of course, but nothing spectacular is contemplated. His administration has many more problems than prohibition. He wishes the public would talk more of them.

House Leader Is Expected to Guide Committee in Framing Tariff Bill.

FARM WANTS IN DOUBT

After having asked the New England forces to be moderate in their tariff demands, in his Boston speech, Representative John Q. Tilson, Republican floor leader, arrived yesterday to take charge of preparations for the special session.

While not a member of the ways and means committee, Mr. Tilson will be the directing force in the preparation of the bill, so far as the administration is concerned, in the opinion of House leaders.

Mr. Tilson finds preparation of the tariff bill going on according to schedule, but is confronted with a chaotic situation relative to the farm-relief bill, which is to be the companion piece in giving farm relief by tariff enactment.

Outside of its statement of general fundamental principles, the administration has given no evidence of what it desires in the way of legislation, leaving it to the Senate and House committees to work out details.

In the campaign the former supporters of equalization fee put the responsibility squarely up to Mr. Hoover and are now disposed to let the President guide the legislation.

Up to date this disposition to "pass the buck" has not discovered any responsive spirit either at the White House or the Department of Agriculture.

"Nothing until the President's message," is the disconcerting word that comes to the representatives and senators on the hill, while the farm-relief bill, according to the legislative schedule, is to be made ready when Congress convenes.

ACCUSED BANK HEAD BACK; OFFERS AID

into the bank's vault to replace other notes which, in the parlance of bankers, were "cold notes." The latter notes were given as security for loans which Lang had approved as president of the institution but which the makers of the notes were unable to redeem.

The only criminal charge pending against Lang is in connection with the substitution of the forged notes, but there has been filed with the bank a claim by William Abbott, former Sullivan resident, for $50,000 worth of Liberty bonds which he declares he gave into Lang's custody.

One of the first statements by Lang upon reaching here was to deny that he had taken Abbott's bonds. He said the bonds were once in his possession, but that Abbott had called for them, the bonds were turned over to him and a receipt given to the bank for them. This receipt, he declared, is in the possession of the bank.

Crowder, the receiver, says that the bank holds the document which Lang declares is the receipt for the bonds, but he declares its validity will have to be passed upon when the case comes before the Knox Circuit Court.

In addition to his claim for $50,000 for the Liberty bonds, Abbott also has on file a claim for $27,000 in cash that was on deposit in the bank.

BOOTLEGGER'S PLAN FOR PEACE FAILURE

Policeman Killed and Rival Shot at Fraternal Feast Is About to Start.

BANQUET HOST ARRESTED

New York, March 19 (U.P.).—Bootlegging rivalry was so intense in Brooklyn that Charles "Vinnie" Higgins, who since the death of Frankie Yale has been considered a leader, decided on a peace conference with his greatest enemy.

It was to be an elaborate dinner, but the meal never came off. As the guests started to assemble shooting broke out and Daniel Maloney, a patrolman, was killed; Thomas Connell, a bootlegger, was shot, and, as usual, an innocent bystander, Harold Richard, also was shot.

What connection Maloney had with the affair is unknown, but much suspicion is cast on him. When his body was found, he had one pistol in his hand, two pistols in his pocket and a number of shells for a sawed-off shot gun.

Higgins and several of his aids were arrested. Higgins called the meeting for the Owl Head Cafe in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn last night. He invited Connell, his nemesis, and the Connells to dine with him and a few of the Higgins followers. Higgins suggested that the women folks be invited to assure peace.

Time for the dinner came and Higgins, his men and their women were there. But no Connell. Higgins feared that some trap had been planned and learned Connell was drinking at a bar not far away. He went to the bar and found Connell with Maloney, who was not on duty. Higgins persuaded Connell to join the dinner, and as the two started climbing into a motor car, Maloney emerged from the bar and started shooting. More than a score of shots were fired.

Sgt. Charles McCarty, who was not in uniform, heard the shooting and saw Maloney running after a man. Maloney had a gun in his hand. McCarty gave the hall order, which was disobeyed, and Maloney turned to fire on the sergeant. McCarty shot Maloney four times.

Governor of Wyoming Hits Hoover Oil Stand

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 19 (A.P.).—Gov. Frank C. Emerson of Wyoming announced today he had telegraphed invitation to the governors of the other Rocky Mountain States to attend a conference in Cheyenne to discuss the presidential oil conservation policy and its effects on Western interests.

Gov. Emerson said he also had sent a second message to President Hoover and the Secretary of the Interior taking issue with the oil and gas conservation order.

FACES DEATH

MABEL NORMAND, Los Angeles, March 19 (A.P.).—Mabel Normand, former movie star, is suffering from advanced tuberculosis. Dr. E. C. Fishbaugh, physician attending her, said today. The physician said that while death was not imminent, the actress has little chance of recovery.

House Is Sawed Apart To Save It From Fire

Bremen, Maine, March 19 (A.P.).—The village of Micoogus, near here, has no fire fighting equipment, but it has crosscut saws, logging chains and large automobile trucks.

When fire broke out last night in a residence, the ell of which houses the postoffice, the villagers sawed the two portions apart, hooked on their chains and dragged the burning structure to a safe distance where they let it burn. The blaze did not spread to the post-office nor an adjoining barn.

Capone Leaves U. S. For Visit to Nassau

Will Return in Two Days to Go as Gang Slaughter Witness in Chicago.

Miami, Fla., March 19 (A.P.).—Al Capone, according to information given out by his secretary today, left Miami this morning for Nassau, where he will stay for what the secretary described as an indefinite period.

Capone had been subpoenaed several weeks ago to appear before a Chicago grand jury investigating St. Valentine's Day killings in Chicago, and later had arranged to appear before the body on March 21. At Capone's home no information was available as to his means of departure for the Bahamas city, but it was said that he will stay there for two days, returning here on the day when he is scheduled for appearance before the Chicago investigators.

Check of steamship and airplane lines operating between here and Nassau showed that Capone was not registered under his own name as a passenger, and it was presumed that he had chartered a boat for the excursion. His secretary said he did not know whether Capone had changed his plans about his trip to Chicago.

ANTIOCH SHOES SHOES OF HAPPINESS

ANTIOCH COLLEGE found its girl students unduly fatigued, and discovered bad footwear to be a contributing cause. So it undertook to remedy the trouble.

The result, after five years of patient, scientific research, in cooperation with its medical department, is the ANTIOCH SHOE.

It is recommended by prominent physicians for normal feet—to keep them normal, and prevent foot trouble in the future.

Film

and robs them of all lustre

It clings to teeth so ordinary brushing fails to remove it successfully. A new way dentists urge.

ASK a famous screen star how to keep your teeth dazzling white and she will tell you to keep teeth free of film. Ask your dentist how to avoid decay and pyorrhea, he will say, "Remove film from your teeth twice daily."

Today it's known film is the cause of dull, discolored teeth as well as the serious tooth and gum disorders. To remove it scientifically, employ the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent.

FILM—What it is Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film. It absorbs stains from food and smoking and turns white teeth dull.

Pepsodent

The Special Film-Removing Dentifrice

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays.

Film hardens into tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. And germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Film must be removed each day. Ordinary brushing fails to do it successfully. So dentists urge the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent.

First, Pepsodent curdles film, then removes it in gentle safety to enamel. No other way will make teeth as sparkling white. Write for free 10-day supply to The Pepsodent Co., 1104 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, or ask your druggist for full-size tube. Find out, without delay, how white your teeth really are. You'll be amazed.

TO ENFORCE ALL THE LAWS.

President Hoover makes it plain that his purpose in creating a commission to inquire into law enforcement is not to prepare for a spectacular drive for the enforcement of the prohibition law. His aim is to bring about better enforcement of all law. Inferentially, his plans are handicapped when the authorities pick out the prohibition law for special attention and indulge in spasmodic and hysterical raids.

It is high time for official authority to recognize the fact that the prohibition law is not supreme over other laws. When the authorities neglect the enforcement of other laws to concentrate upon enforcement of the prohibition law they encourage crime instead of preventing it. Banditry, burglary, highway robbery, and financial crimes are on the increase, partly because officers of the law are engaged in chasing bootleggers and making sensational liquor raids for advertising purposes. Mr. Hoover evidently has no use for this kind of law enforcement.

The confusion of laws and the technicalities of judicial procedure facilitate unpunished crime. Not all the blame for crime increase can be laid upon popular opposition to the prohibition law. Justice must be made more swift and certain against murderers, forgers and other criminals as well as against prohibition violators. The problem has deep roots in the faults of legislatures and legal procedure, as well as in the loosening of family ties and in the increased facility with which criminals can make their getaway.

It is reassuring to the public to know that the President of the United States does not intend to run amuck in an attempt to enforce a single law to the neglect of all others.

BETTER FOOD, BETTER MEN.

The artist and the inventor who work and starve in their attics have long been foremost among the picturesque characters of fiction as well as of actual life. Marvelous results have often come from the application of mind to unsolved problems under conditions of poverty, but the wisdom of any civilization permitting its men of genius to labor under adverse conditions has often been questioned. Now comes Dr. John Munroe, of Long Island University, with a pronouncement that undernourishment is a serious handicap to intelligence.

Sixteen years ago Dr. Munroe began his study of the relative influence of heredity and environment, using the children of the Fairbault (Minn.) public schools for experimentation. During his exhaustive research he measured the relative intelligence of 5,000 school children, following 700 of them through high school and college into business life. Since he chose representative children and applied the most accurate scientific tests, his work should prove a valuable index on the relation of environment to intellect.

The most striking conclusion reached by Dr. Munroe is that intelligence among students may vary from 5 to 25 points within a few years as a result of different environment. He found food to be the most important confounding influence, and reports that children of well-to-do families have much better chances of becoming intelligent adults, simply because they are better fed. "I am convinced as a result of my experiments," he said, "that much of the low intelligence among laboring people is due to the fact that for generations they have had poor and insufficient food." When he noticed that some children were falling behind further each year he studied home environments, with especial reference to food and cooking, and found striking correspondence between undernourishment and sluggish mental development.

The investigation gives further convincing evidence of the close relationship between poverty and crime. Dr. Munroe followed up every individual in his original group who turned out to be a criminal and found that 95 per cent of them had low intelligence aggravated by poor food and bad environment. His findings indicate that much of the crime in the world could be eliminated through higher standards of living.

If Dr. Munroe's findings are correct, improvement of environment may go much further than amelioration of crime conditions. "Much of the present shortage of intelligence may be eliminated," he concludes, "when it is recognized that the vicious food conditions, the poor sanitation and hygiene, the brutality of many homes, appear to be the conditioners of morose and borderline dullness, and that rapidly developing intelligence must be stimulated on all levels incessantly if it is to come to full development." He expresses the encouraging hope that stagnation of intelligence can be alleviated, if not largely eliminated, by environmental manipulation.

Results of the investigation are interesting, indeed, but the solution Dr. Munroe offers for increasing the racial intelligence is not as simple as it sounds. It involves abolition of poverty and the application of scientific rules of health, diet and conduct to the entire population. Complete success in this effort would be the achievement of the millennium, and is not to be expected, but it is to the honor and glory of man that he keeps trying.

MEXICAN MANEUVERS.

Gen. Escobar's withdrawal from Torreón to Escalon, 100 miles to the northward, is an indication that his forces are no match for the federals in a finish fight. If the rebels were approximately as strong as the federals and as well supplied with ammunition they would hardly give up Torreón, which is a strategic point of great importance because of its railroad connections.

Presumably the rebels have torn up the railroad tracks and destroyed the bridges behind them, as they have done heretofore. The onward march of Gen. Calles' forces will probably be delayed; but the march must go on if the rebellion is to be put down. The taking of Torreón without the defeat of the rebels is like the capture of a nest after the birds have flown.

By the time the federals have made their way to Escalon the rebels may be ready to fall back to Chihuahua, destroying the railroad as they go. So long as they are an organized force numbering several thousand men they will hold the attention of the federal main army. The rebels do not seem to be making any progress elsewhere, but on the other hand the federals have not scattered them. Surprises may be in store along the west coast.

The prolongation of the campaign favors the federals in two respects, by making it more and more improbable that federal garrisons will go over to the rebels, and by wearing down the rebel supply of munitions. But the failure to bring about a decisive action may also bring some advantage to the rebels by giving them time to stir up revolts in the south, and to win popular support by their policy of reopening the churches.

Undoubtedly the help given to the federal cause by the United States is one of the principal factors in the situation. If the federalists should succeed in stamping out the rebellion they will be under great obligations to the United States, which they may discharge by rank ingratitude and bad faith, as was the case when the United States befriended Oregon. Beyond fair words and empty promises, neither Calles nor Portes Gil has done anything to restore or preserve the rights of Americans in Mexico.

HOMICIDE AND CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman's study of homicide in the United States has brought out some interesting facts which he interprets to mean that "the death penalty acts as a deterrent to swift and adequate justice, imposes heavy burdens upon the taxpayers as the result of long trials, fosters sensationalism of the worst possible type and stains the civilization of those who enforce it." Analysis of more extensive figures tends rather to prove that homicide is increasing in the United States because of the excellent chances a slayer has of escaping punishment. It appears that capital punishment has little to do with the homicide rate.

Dr. Hoffman finds that the large cities of the country do not have the highest homicide rates. Ten leading Southern cities show an average of 38.6 homicides for every 100,000 persons. Memphis has a rate of 60.5, while the average rate for the largest cities of the country is but 10. Chicago has lost first place among the large cities to Detroit. Cleveland comes third, Philadelphia fourth, New York fifth, and Los Angeles sixth, with a rate of only 4.7 per 100,000.

The ten Southern cities mentioned are all located in States that have capital punishment laws. Illinois, Ohio, and Pennsylvania inflict the death punishment on first degree murderers. But in Michigan, whose largest city is foremost among the homicide centers, only life imprisonment is exacted. California has capital punishment, and the homicide rate in its largest city is only slightly more than one-fourth of that in Michigan. It seems therefore safe to conclude that capital punishment laws are not a vital factor in determining the number of murders in any State.

While some of the States have been modifying their statutes from capital punishment to life imprisonment, the murder rate has doubled during the last 30 years. The reason is not that capital punishment is so seldom imposed, but that the States have failed to make justice certain and swift. Only a small percentage of those convicted of homicide are executed, even in States that have capital punishment. New York State, which may be taken as an example, convicted 121 and executed 16 for homicide in 1927. In the same year 372 persons were murdered in New York City, and only 43 persons were convicted.

The prevalence of crimes of violence can not be attributed to capital punishment. Any statistics that may be gathered will show that the criminal has many chances to one of escaping with no punishment whatever. As long as these conditions exist in the United States a high homicide rate can be expected.

A COTTON SUBSTITUTE.

Considerable interest attaches to the announcement in London that American buyers have entered the market for artificial cotton manufactured from a South American plant which is being developed by Dr. C. J. Hedley-Thornton. Until now the American cotton interests have been skeptical of the economic value of the plant. The fact that Americans have entered the artificial cotton market may presage development of this new fiber root in the United States.

The London dispatch says that Dr. Hedley-Thornton's corporation has orders for 1,000,000 pounds of the artificial cotton and that it is completing arrangements to float subsidiary companies to grow and market the product in Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Czechoslovakia and Roumania. The plant grows prolifically in all of these countries in soil that is unsuitable to most crops. It is reported to be much harder than the cotton plant, is not subject to the boll weevil, and costs less to grow and harvest than cotton. It can be handled by cotton-spinning machinery.

England is expected to have a commercial supply of the new fiber this summer and if the advantages of the substitute are as great as reported, the production in other countries which now import cotton will develop rapidly. It appears that a period of stiff competition against American cotton lies just ahead.

It may be found practical to grow the substitute on much of the land that is now devoted to cotton in the South. And since the plant will thrive in moderate climates, cotton fields may develop in the Northern and Western States. Much land that is now unproductive might be put to work growing the substitute plant, and valuable lands now devoted to cotton could be used for more profitable crops. Whatever turn the new industry takes, American planters and manufacturers may be depended upon to develop it to the best interests of this country.

MARYLAND'S ROAD PROGRAM.

A program of highway development in which Maryland will spend $23,898,000 during the coming two years has been outlined by Gov. Ritchie. The money will be devoted principally to construction of new roads and bridges, elimination of grade crossings, and maintenance of present highways. It is the largest sum ever available for roads in that State, and represents an increase of more than $9,000,000 over the appropriations for the past and current years. The announcement places Maryland among the leading States in highway development, and indicates the vast amounts that are being spent in the United States for roads.

Figures are not available for 1928, but a report of the United States Bureau of Public Roads shows that the 48 States spent $699,875,182 for roads in 1927. During the same year counties and other political units spent $748,245,735, making a total of $1,448,120,917. The figure quoted for the States includes $75,000,000 which is made available each year by the Government to be used by the States on a participation basis. However, the burden falls largely on the State and local governments, and it is likely that this item of expense will increase from year to year.

The phenomenal increase of motor vehicle traffic has made this highway development necessary. Between 35,000 and 40,000 miles of new road are opened to traffic each year, and thousands of miles are improved with pavement or other hard surface material. There are now several excellent highways stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, and the trunk highways of nearly every State are highly improved. Over these highways it is estimated that Americans travel more than 143,115,977,760 miles per year in motor vehicles.

Highways construction is one of the principal items responsible for the general increase in State taxes. Yet highways represent an investment that is absolutely essential under modern conditions. A State that fails to develop its roads not only drives away profitable tourist traffic, but throttles its own commerce. States which are leading in the good roads movement may expect to reap the greatest benefits, in spite of higher taxes.

Out on a Texas golf course they have a turkey sitting on a nest full of retrieved golf balls. Maybe she's hoping to raise a card of birds.

ENUMERATING AMERICA.

By OLIVER McKEE, JR.,
in the New York Times.

An army of 100,000 enumerators will begin on January 1, 1930, to count the population of the United States for the fifteenth census. Notwithstanding the failure of the Seventieth Congress to send to the President the bill providing for this census, Director W. M. Stewart and his assistants are completing plans for taking the count under the authority of the census bill of ten years ago. The law of 1920 has several defects, and new legislation is needed by July 1 if the Census Bureau is to do a satisfactory job.

The 1930 census will be the biggest undertaking of its kind in history. It will cost, over a three-year period, including the printing of the results, about $39,000,000, or more than 30 cents for each person counted. The Census Bureau has received $19,000,000 for the first year's work, so the failure of the bill in the Seventieth Congress has not kept from the bureau the funds necessary to begin the project.

The expenses incident to taking a census have been steadily mounting. It cost $44,377.28 to count the 3,929,214 Americans in 1790, the year of the first census. Enumerators then received one-third of a cent to two cents for every person counted. Fifty years later the population of the United States had increased to 17,069,453, and the census of 1840 cost the taxpayers $833,370. Ten years later the cost had jumped to well over $1,000,000, and the figures have increased with each successive decade. The fourteenth census, taken in 1920, showed a population of 105,710,620, and the American people paid out $25,117,000 for this and related data. The scope of the census has steadily broadened through the years, making the decennial count increasingly expensive. Population figures are only a part of the census.

The new census will probably show a relative slowing up in the growth of our population. For the first seven decades of our history, the population increased at the rate of about 35 per cent every 70 years. For the next three decades the rate of increase was 28 per cent, followed by a drop to 21 per cent for the next 20 years. The 1920 census showed a population of 105,710,620, a 14.9 per cent increase over the 1910 totals. The 1930 census may well reveal a rate of increase even smaller than this.

The fourteenth census revealed that the percentage of our 1920 urban population was 51.4, as compared with 45.8 in 1910. An even greater percentage of Americans, in all probability, will be classed as city residents in next year's count, a city being officially defined as an incorporated community with a population of 2,500 or more. In 1880, the percentage of city dwellers was only 28.6.

The 1930 census will not be confined to population figures. It will be a census of population, agriculture, irrigation, drainage, mines and manufactures. The agricultural census will provide an inventory or cross-section of the resources and status of the farming industry. It will thus give the basic data for research work in agricultural economics and extension work.

A Slap on the Wrist.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Where Law Breakdown Began.

To the Editor of The Post-Sir: Without mincing words, the breaking down of the respect for the Constitution of the United States began with the open disfranchisement of negroes in and by the South. The lawbreakers of every class were taught by this act how to evade the sacred and fundamental mandates of our Government. It was the basis of our Constitution. How they by State enactments defied the law of the land, and we are just now reaping an aroused public opinion to our danger and a full swing of open violations of all our laws. Let us, as an honest, sincere people, go to the very root of our present trouble and cease trying to enforce the eighteenth amendment alone, but the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments involving human rights, and all other provisions of our Constitution.

To this end the President himself could appoint a colored man on the survey enforcement commission, and he, no doubt, more ably and accurately than citizens of other group distinctions, would tell the world how prejudice and hate have taken the place of justice and how we are now realizing justice, the terrible results.

This is the black harvest of our own reckless sowing. E. D. W. JONES, Bishop Seventh Episcopal District.

To the Editor of The Post-Sir: Regarding the diplomatic liquor controversy, may I submit some comments quoted from Richard Washburn Childs, former Ambassador of the United States to Italy, about international relations in general? Some of your correspondents seem to be discussing it from a provincial or small town point of view, forgetting that international law is vastly broader than local propositions. Our Ambassador to Italy, it seems, was arrested by mistake in a small Italian town and hailed before the local chief of police. Upon informing the officer that he was the American Ambassador the chief laughed heartily. But Childs, having his credentials with him, was able to convince the police officers of his identity, who then began to try to save his face, falling back on the rights of people to govern themselves. Please note, however, that he did not claim the right to govern the entire world, as one correspondent writing under nom de plume of E. Phuribus Unum does hold in your morning issue. But he informed our ambassador that his proper course was to go through the courts of Italy.

"Italy is a proud nation," said he; "her courts will settle the matter and no doubt will end by doing you honor." "The United States is a proud nation," replied Childs, "but in the United States your ambassador has special protection. He would not be arrested and sent to court. It is so arranged that affairs between two great nations shall always be friendly."

"Dio mio!" the officer exclaimed; "Italy must do everything the United States can do. We are as proud as you."

So clicking his heels together, he offered Childs a detachment of soldiers to accompany him to his car. And, as Childs makes comment, "He had his first lesson in sovereignty, which is proud because it can relax to custom and courtesy."

This latter comment seems the crux of the whole matter, the element of courtesy. No hard and fast law or rule can be made to fit all nations of the world, or all combinations of circumstances. So this is the significance of diplomatic immunity. It is the oil of diplomatic machinery by which nations of the world have some chance of dwelling together in a degree of peace and harmony. But if some of these bumptious, rampant, fanatical and provincial-minded reformers had their way, we would be engaged in world wars all the time, as no self-respecting nation will take dictation from another. If a Man Kills a Lion, Common Sense Assumes the Existence of a Weapon.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE fact that man survives today is sufficient proof that he was much the same creature when the world was young.

The proof of his unchanging nature is found in his helplessness.

The point of that may seem obscure, but common sense makes it obvious—and here is the logic of it.

Man is the most helpless of all creatures—the most easily preyed upon and destroyed.

His best weapons are his hands, and these are so brittle that they shatter when he strikes a blow.

He can run, once he has learned how, but any of the meat eaters can overhaul and bring him down with ease.

He has no claws; his teeth are the harmless teeth of the grass-eater; he has no protecting mane; his hide is thin; as nature equipped him, he can neither escape nor stand and fight with any hope of success.

The diggers who search in the earth for history discover the bones of great creatures that roamed the earth untold thousands of years ago, and nearly all of them were greater and more terrible than the beasts of the jungle today; but the earliest trace of man yet discovered reveals him as much the same puny creature he is now.

If his primitive life made him stronger and more fleet than the modern, his gain was small; for the creatures that preyed on him were in like proportion more savage than the moderns.

Of all creatures, only man's young were born helpless. They alone had to learn the art of walking. They alone had to be nursed and carried for months.

And if these weakest and most helpless of creatures survived, as quite obviously they did, they must at all times have possessed a cunning and a sound intelligence peculiar to their species.

To say that man developed his brain and the ability to use weapons in a period comparatively recent is patently absurd; for if at any time he had been forced to rely on his physical prowess alone, he and his kind would have been annihilated.

If for one generation—or for one decade—during his mythical development, he had been without a superior mind he would have been eaten and the earth would have seen his like no more.

Other soft, ground creatures without fangs or claws are protected by their color, their fleetness of foot or their marvelous fecundity; but man has no other protection than his mind, and his survival is sufficient proof that he had it while earth was in the making.

If any creature survives a flood without a float, its survival is sufficient proof that it can swim.

can not be drunk legally here by a diplomat" merely shows ignorance and is worth notice only because there is so much of that kind of ignorance. In his embassy a diplomat is under his own flag and on his own soil and subject to the laws of his own government.

But suppose we could impose one common rule or law on any subject on all the oppressive, inoperative, or very such case would be the dictator?

HINDA BURKE.

The Eruption of Laws.

To the Editor of The Post-Sir: Congratulations on the cartoon by James North appearing in your issue of Sunday anent the continual eruption of laws.

Early in 1924 there appeared, as a plank in the campaign platform of an independent reform party, the following—true then and now:

"We are of the opinion, apparently concurred in by the majority of members of the bar and the people at large, that we have, at the present time, far too many laws upon our statute books, many of which are conflicting, ambiguous, obsolete, discriminating, unjust, unfair, oppressive, inoperative, or very unpopular, and it is high time we called a halt on the enactment of so many new and unnecessary laws. Repeal, simplify and codify all existing laws, after repealing all such laws as above noted, and couch all laws in such direct and simple language that all ambiguities will be eradicated and possibility of misconstruction reduced to the minimum."

"It is quite evident, even to the less discriminating person, that a revision and simplification of our court system, with its present overlapping and conflicting jurisdictions, its many and largely unnecessary technicalities, its verbose and antediluvian forms and methods of procedure, would certainly tend to hasten action, prevent errors, increase efficiency and certainty of law enforcement and would greatly elevate

PRESS COMMENT.

And Pedestrians.
Aitchison Globe: The most foolish pedestrians are chickens.

Oh, Yes.
New York Sun: No, Anxious Reader, what you heard was not March coming in like a lion, but Daves going out.

A Bigger Job.
Boston Herald: Many a bread line Mr. Hoover has relieved, but this is the first time he has had to deal with a plum pudding line.

The Talkie Menace.
Philadelphia Inquirer: The talkies have now invaded State legislatures. Thirty-eight of them have women members.

The Test.
Detroit News: A President is back in private life when he has to get a newspaper in off the porch to find out what's doing, like the rest of us.

Praise Be!
San Diego Union: We still have much to be thankful for. They haven't yet put the gum-chewing championships into the talking movies.

Some Job.
Norfolk Virginian-Pilot: Mr. Hoover, as the Republican leader has only to get a Cabinet together, but we Democrats have to do that with a whole party.

Inconspicuously.
Indianapolis Star: A prophet is not without honor save in his own country, but a governor at a presidential inauguration is merely among those present.

They Know Better.
Cincinnati Enquirer: Edison says we don't know a millionth of a per cent about anything, but the college boys who are soon to graduate will tell you.

How Come?
Indianapolis News: The man who can't keep the furnace fire going all night would like to know how a fire has burned in an Ohio coal mine for 45 years.

We're Waiting.
Ohio State Journal: The average age of the members of President Hoover's Cabinet is 60 and we're waiting with an open mind to see whether this proves that men ought to be chloroformed at that age or not.

Like a National Committee.
Richmond Times-Dispatch: Perhaps it would be the part of economy for Mexico to keep the present revolution, in progress. The setting up of a new one every now and then would appear to be more costly than the upkeep of an old one.

Houston Bids.
Houston Post-Dispatch: If it is not absolutely necessary to have the inaugurations in the City of Washington, and the date can not be changed, we'd be glad to offer the largest convention hall, the most beautiful city and the most wonderful climate in the world for future inaugurations.

Wait and See.
Philadelphia Inquirer: Press criticism of President Hoover's Cabinet is, to say the least, premature. To assert that Secretary Mellon is the only outstanding member betrays a short memory. Eight years ago the same critic was charging Mr. Mellon's appointment to a political debt. At that time his administrative capacity, untested by problems of state, was unknown to the general public. Later when his special fitness for the job made him one of the leaders in the Cabinet, many people had to reverse their former opinion. Political judgments might profit by a rule of literary appreciation which urges one to avoid condemning a book until after he has read it.

CRASH KILLS FLIER; INJURES COMPANION

J. M. Barrett, National Guard Captain in Maryland, Dies in Virginia Accident.

MOTOR TROUBLE BLAMED

Special to The Washington Post.
Winchester, Va., March 19.—John M. Barrett, 35 years old, of Baltimore, a captain in the Air Corps of the Maryland National Guard, was killed, and Herbert Schutte, a Winchester automobile dealer and aviation enthusiast, was seriously injured, shortly before noon today, when an airplane in which they had been making a flight over Winchester and vicinity crashed near the Bowles Airport from an altitude of about 700 feet.

Barrett was dead when witnesses of the accident reached the plane, and Schutte, semiconscious, was lifted from the wreck and rushed to a hospital, where he was found to have a fractured leg, several ribs and injuries to his head, as well as numerous cuts and bruises. He probably will recover, doctors said.

Investment Bankers' Agent.
Barrett, who traveled this territory for J. S. Wilson Jr. & Co., investment bankers of Baltimore, and served in the American Flying Corps during the World War, was making his second flight here. He had just flown with D. W. Alexander, licensed pilot of the airport, and decided to make another, with Schutte, one of the owners of the plane, a dual control Waco biplane.

Barrett was in the front cockpit and Schutte occupied the rear. Doctors refused to admit any one to Schutte's room. It is not known which of the two was operating the machine when the crash occurred.

They had been in the air about twenty minutes, when city employees, working on a road half a mile east of town, heard the roar of the motor and observed puffs of black smoke coming from the exhaust. The pilot appeared to be making a rather abrupt turn. The roar of the motor stopped, the propeller turned slowly, a wing sagged, and the machine went into a nose dive, landing in a clover field just north of the Washington-Winchester highway. The propeller burying itself in the ground and the rear tilted in the air.

Barrett Crushed by Motor.
Barrett was caught between the motor and cockpit seat and crushed to death.

A physician who examined the body after it had been removed by order of the coroner said nearly every bone was broken and that death had been instantaneous. The plane was completely wrecked.

Barrett had a wide acquaintance in northern Virginia and nearby West Virginia sections and was interested in aviation. He occasionally flew here on business trips. Friends said he distinguished himself in the A. E. F. service in France, and was regarded as Fred Cornwell, commander of the Fourth Police Precinct, and for many years assigned to the Detective Bureau, was added to the growing list of candidates for appointment as police chief to succeed Maj. The Commissioners have announced that no action would be taken until Hesse's retirement application had been formally approved by the retiring board, which is to meet tomorrow.

Confederate Museum Gets Flag of Virginia Regiment

Battle Emblem of Famous Civil War Organization, Made by Richmond Wives and Mothers of Soldiers, Was Carried Throughout the Struggle.

Richmond, Va., March 19 (A.P.).—The famous Confederate battle flag of the First Virginia Regiment, embroidered by the women of Richmond from their silk dresses and followed by the noted command from Bull Run to Gettysburg, came today to the Confederate Museum to rest with other Southern trophies. The museum is in the old White House of the Confederacy.

The bloodstained and battle-scarred banner saw its last service in Pickett's immortal charge at Gettysburg when the Southern troops swept up the slopes of Cemetery Hill to the Federal defenses before the ebb began. Preserved by the late Col. Charles T. Loehr, historian and custodian of the First Virginia, the flag was presented to the museum today by his children, William A. Loehr, Charles E. Loehr, Mrs. Oscar L. Kent and Mrs. Bernard L. Dickinson.

Col. Loehr, as historian, described the fate of the flag on the day of Pickett's charge in these words: "The color guard is dead and the color sergeant has lost his arm; our colonel lies dying on the field—the regiment lost 120 men out of about 160 who went into that charge."

The Confederate Museum was founded and is maintained largely by Southern women. The historic flag was made by wives and mothers of Confederate soldiers after a design approved by Gen. Beauregard. It was used continuously after the first battle of Bull Run. The First Virginia, now given the name again, after being known as the 18th Infantry since the World War, is one of the noted military commands of the United States, being organized in 1890 and bearing on the list of commanders the names of such men as George Washington and Patrick Henry. It has participated in all this country's wars since its organization.

Going to the dance, McCarthy was arrested by Policeman A. H. Pool, who said the youth's automobile was traveling at a 60-mile clip. The second arrest was made by Policeman F. J. Scoville, who charged McCarthy making 35 miles an hour and having too many persons on the front seat in violation of emergency control regulations. McCarthy was arrested both times on Sixteenth street and both arrests were booked at the Thirteenth Precinct.

IT'S the person with a clear, smooth, lovely complexion that usually wins.

To be sure, not much is said openly about skin eruptions, but secretly they influence many important affairs. Personal likes and dislikes are quickly formed.

Rx Take before each meal

Everybody wants to be attractive. It is a just and natural ambition. A clear skin makes everyone more attractive.

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils, eczema and other skin eruptions as being an indication that the body's power of resistance is low—that there is a deficiency of red-blood-cells.

The sure way to remedy this condition is to restore the red-blood-cells to normal.

This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of those unsightly blemishes and painful skin an-noyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

S.S.S. helps Nature restore the blood to its normal state. Healthy blood makes the body strong and resistant to disease.

Without plenty of rich, red blood there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or healthy, beautiful women.

If you are troubled with so-called skin disorders or if the count of your red-blood-cells is low, take a few bottles of S.S.S. Seek energy, vitality and a clear skin through the remedy, which is made from fresh vegetable drugs, and has stood the test of over 100 years.

BROOKHART STUDIES LARGER PAY RAISES

Bureaus Are Asked to Reveal
Increases Given to Higher-Paid Employees.

PLANS TO RENEW FIGHT

Senator Smith W. Brookhart (Republican), perhaps the outstanding friend of the Government workers, in the Senate, already has begun to gird himself for a fight on their behalf at the next regular session.

At the last session, Brookhart made a valiant, but vain fight to increase the salaries of those employees who were slighted under the Welch pay raise act. He also fought the proposal to reduce the salaries of the higher-paid employees.

Yesterday Brookhart revealed that he had written to all Government departments asking them to supply him with information as to just how much the higher-paid employees got in the way of raises under the Welch act.

Cases have been cited where a chief in the service got a $2,000 raise, whereas a clerk in the same office got only a $80 raise. Friends of these high-salaried employees, however, point out that even with their new salaries, they get less than persons who do comparable work on the outside.

Brookhart is primarily concerned with helping the low-paid employees who got only half what they were supposed to get under the Welch act—that is, the employees who got only $60 when Congress intended that they should get $120 and those who got only $100 when it was intended that they should get $200.

At the same time, he wants to be well posted on the status of the higher-paid employees. Discussing the matter yesterday, he said:

"I have heard so much talk about the increases in these higher grades that I decided to get reports from all the departments to show exactly what increases were granted in each individual case in the higher grades."

He had served in the United States Army for many years, winning distinction in numerous campaigns against the Indians and reaching the grade of captain before his retirement. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy in the class of 1887. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Moss, and three daughters, Miss Emilie Nixon Moss, Miss Marjorie Moss and Miss Elizabeth Moss.

Mrs. Morrison had been a resident of Washington for the past 35 years. She was active in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and the Women's Relief Corps of the C. A. E. She was the widow of John Morrison. She is survived by a son, Clarke J. Morrison, of Bloomfield, N. J., and a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Morrison Smith, of the Fairmont street address.

The Children By Edith Wharton

A sparkling serial story by one of America's foremost novelists at the gleaming heights of her power.

In a flash she was out of his arms, and ecstatically facing him. "A way—a way of keeping us all together?" Ah, how hard her questions were to answer!

Boyd drew her down again beside him. Crying was a laborious and disfiguring business to her, and her face was so drawn and tear-stained that she looked almost old; but its misery was shot through with hope. If he could have kept her there, not speaking, only answering her with endearments, how easy, how exquisite it would have been! But her face was tense with expectation, and he had to find words, for her, for he knew that his silence would have no meaning to her.

"Judith—" he began; but she interrupted: "Call me Judy, or I shall think it's more bad news." He made no answer, and she flung herself against him with a cry of alarm. "Martini! Martini! You're not going to desert us too?"

He held her hands, but his own had begun to tremble. "Darling, I'll never desert you; I'll stay with you always, if you'll have me; if things go wrong I'll always be there to look after you and defend you; no matter what happens, we'll never be separated any more."

He broke off, his voice falling before the sudden sunrise in her eyes. "Oh, Martini—" She lifted his hands one by one to her wet cheeks, and held them there in silent bliss. "Then you don't belong any longer to Mrs. Sellars?"

"I don't belong to any one but you—for as long as ever you'll have me."

Her eyes still bathed him in their radiance. "My darling, my darling," she leaned close as she said it, and he dared not move. In his new awe of her nearness—so subtly had she changed from the child of his familiar endearments to the woman he passionately longed for.

"Darling," she said again; then, with a face in which the bridal light seemed already kindled,

"Oh, Martini, do you really mean you're going to adopt us all, and we're all going to stay with you forever?"

CHAPTER XXIX.

BOYNE felt like a man who has blundered along in the dark to the edge of a precipice. He trembled inwardly with the effort of recovery, and the shock of finding himself flung back into his old world.

Judith, in a rush of gratitude, had thrown her arms about him; and he shrank from her touch, from the warm smell of her hair, from everything about her which he had to think back into terms of childhood and comradeship, while every vein in his body still ached for her. There was nothing he would have dreaded as much as her detecting the least trace of what he was feeling. His first care must be to hide the break in their perfect communion—the fact that for a moment she had been for him the woman she would some day be for another man, in a future he could never share. He undid her hands and walked away to the window.

When he turned to her again he had struggled back to some sort of composure. "Judy, child, I wish you wouldn't take such terrible life-leaves on the future." He tried to smile as he said it. "I'm always afraid it will bring you bad luck. We'd much better live from hand to mouth. I'm ready to promise all that reasonable man can—that I'll put up another big fight for you, and that I don't despair of winning it. At any rate, I'll be there; I'll stand by you; I won't desert you."

He broke off reading in her unsteady eyes the hopelessness of pitifully vague assurances.

"Yes," she assented, in a voice as small and colorless as her face. He stood before her miserably. "You do understand, dear, don't you?"

"I'm not sure," she hesitated. "A little while ago I thought I did."

His nerves began to twitch again. Could he bear to go into the question with her once more—and what would be the use if he did? The immediate future must somehow or other be dealt with; but the last few minutes had deprived him of all will and energy. He had the desolate sense of her knowing that he had failed her, and yet not being able to guess why.

"Of course I'll do what I can," he repeated.

She remained silent, constrained by the constraint; and he saw the disappointment in her eyes.

"You don't believe me?" Still she looked at him perplexedly. "But you said, I thought you said just now that you'd found a way of keeping us all together. No matter what happened; you had a plan, you said."

His senseless irritation grew upon him. Could such total simplicity be unforgotten? Could she have such a power of awaking passion without any melting of its meaning? He hated himself for doubting it. In time—a short time, perhaps—her rich nature would come to its ripeness; but as yet the only full-grown faculties in it were her love for her brothers and sisters, and her faith in the few people who had shown her kindness in a world unkindly.

"I'm sorry," she continued, after pausing for an answer which did not come. "I must have misunderstood you, I suppose."

Tax Refunds Plan Is Work of Mellon

Secretary Did Not Make Publicity Program Under Direction of Hoover.

Secretary Mellon prepared the recent proposals making public tax refunds of $20,000 or more of his own volition and without instructions from President Hoover.

It was learned yesterday that these regulations were drawn up by the Secretary and submitted to the President for his approval. It had been intimated in some published reports that President Hoover caused the Secretary to take the action.

At the time that the executive order making public the tax refunds was issued it was stated at the Treasury that Mr. Mellon had drawn up the order, which went further than required under the deficiency appropriation bill. The bill required that all tax refunds of $75,000 or more be made public. Secretary Mellon's action made available to the public all refunds of $20,000 or more.

Anderson Will Conduct Inquiry in Newprint

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that its investigation of the practices of manufacturers and distributors of newspaper paper, requested by a Senate resolution adopted during the last session, will be directed by the chief examiner's division of the commission, headed by Herbert L. Anderson. No date has yet been set for beginning the investigation.

The Senate resolution, which was sponsored by Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota, directed the commission to make an investigation "upon the question of whether any of the practices of the manufacturers and distributors of newspaper paper tend to create a monopoly in the supply of newspaper paper to publishers of small daily and weekly newspapers or constitute a violation of the antitrust laws."

"I had tetter so badly that I could not put my hands in anything or do my work. It started with a small, dry blister, and then the skin would peel off. FLOYD COLLINS' BODY FOUND AFTER THEFT

Casket, on Exhibition in Cave, Is Broken Into and the Corpse Stolen.

MYSTERY VEILS MOTIVE

Horse Cave, Ky., March 19 (A.P.)—The body of Floyd Collins, stolen from its metal and glass casket in Crystal Cave, where it was on exhibition, was found tied in a burlap sack about 400 yards from the cave this afternoon. Bloodhounds led searchers, who included the sheriffs of three counties to the body. No motive for the theft could be advanced by the sheriffs. According to advices received by the county attorney, the body either had been buried or had been mutilated. The seventeen-day battle to save the life of Floyd Collins when he was trapped while exploring the cave stirred the nation in 1925. Relief workers battled furiously to reach the imprisoned man, but before they could release him Collins died.

Recently the body was put on exhibition in Crystal Cave. When attendants reported this morning they noticed that a chain barring the door had been sawed away. Inside they found the casket had been opened and the body removed.

Crystal Cave is owned by Dr. H. B. Thomas, of Horse Cave. Dr. Thomas reported the theft to the sheriff's office early today. He said that about a year ago the cave had been broken into and some one apparently had attempted to carry away the coffin, but had been unsuccessful. The body was in a chamber about 600 feet from the main entrance.

Dr. Thomas said he knew of no motive that would account for the theft.

previously in an attempt to write his way out of the prison.

The first time he forged a pardon, and officials were prepared to release him. As he was marching to the prison gate he winked at another inmate. The authorities became suspicious and detained him while they sought telegraphic confirmation from Washington.

The Department of Justice replied that the pardon was a forgery, and Van Gorder was returned to his cell.

The pardon had been sent by the convict to a friend in Washington, who mailed it to the prison in a franked envelope.

Department of Justice rules prohibiting prison officials from making public any information relative to individual convicts or the time of their release made it possible for Van Gorder to obtain his conviction and a fifteen-year sentence, were unaware that the forged had left the penitentiary.

For months the public has been given little information about the freeing of Federal prisoners. Inquiries at Leavenworth regarding the release of convicts on court orders or paroles and paroles are referred to the Department of Justice at Washington under the rules.

Tells of Fake Documents.
After an investigation at Leavenworth, Alton H. Skinner, assistant United States district attorney for Kansas, told of a fake writ of habeas corpus and three other documents purporting to be orders from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals which Van Gorder used to effect his release.

Skinner said he secured from the judge of the United States District Court at Topeka, Kan., in September, 1928, a writ of habeas corpus ordering the warden of the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth to take Van Gorder to Cape Girardeau, Mo., to stand trial on charges of robbing a postoffice.

Last month Van Gorder wrote F. L. Campbell, clerk of the Federal District Court at Topeka, requesting that two certified copies of the order on which he was taken to Cape Girardeau be sent to him, one for his own use and one for the use of his attorney.

The clerk of the court complied with the request and Van Gorder, on receiving the copies, altered one of them by changing the case number on the order from No. 79 to No. 179, and by changing the date on the copy from February 8, 1929, to February 28, 1929.

FANATIC SUSPECTED AS SEERESS' SLAYER

Killing of Aged Woman Fortune-Teller Puzzles the Georgia Police.

HER $200 HOARD FOUND

Rome, Ga., March 19 (A.P.)—Police tonight faced a long trail in finding the solution to the mysterious slaying of an aged fortune teller and "voodoo" practitioner.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of "death from wounds with a knife inflicted by an unknown person" in the slaying of Martha Russell, 80-year-old fortune teller, the mystery of whose death for two days police had sought to solve. The aged woman, for years an oracle to the superstitious and curious who sought her door when in trouble or seeking advice, was found dead on the floor of her humble home Sunday by negroes.

A mortician said that when found she had been dead for four to five hours. It is believed she was killed several hours after the last person known to have seen her alive reported her moving about in her home.

Negroes living nearby said they saw the woman between 6 and 7 o'clock Saturday evening and since that hour no one has been found who saw her. While still looking to discard the robbery theory, police are inclined to believe she was slain by a superstitious fanatic who believed she had cast a "spell" over him. Nearly $200 was found in the home and police believe that unless the slayer was scared away, which they deem unlikely, he would have experienced no difficulty in finding the hoard.

The woman was believed by the superstitious to have supernatural powers and was said to have practiced witchcraft, which lent strength to the theory that she was slain by a fanatic.

Further evidence to support this theory was the fact that scattered about the house were charms, amulets, locks of hair and other gewgaws usually associated with witchcraft. Police believe the slayer might have been looking for the charm that held an "evil spell" over him.

New, Low Prices for Standard Eights
THE Packard Standard Eight lists today at $2275 to $2675 at the factory—prices comparable to those of its famous forerunner, the Packard Six.
When Packard decided to concentrate its vast resources entirely on Straight Eights, it was with the desire ultimately to provide the advantages of Eight-in-Line design at no increase in prices. The tremendous sales success of the Standard Eight, since its introduction last September, made possible the reduction of $160 March 4th.
The Packard Standard Eight today embodies all of the features which mark Packard leadership. The famous Straight Eight motor, with its nine bearing crankshaft, is unchanged in design. Instant Chassis Lubrication protects precision and assures long car life. The unique and exclusive Shock Absorbing System adds new ease to riding and new safety to driving—for it includes a device which positively eliminates front wheel

Packard has but one standard of quality—
the highest—and the Standard Eight is a
Packard in every sense of the word.
When may we put a car at your disposal for a demonstration?

BRITON SEES WORST CREDIT CRISIS NEAR

Sir George Paish Predicts Trade Restrictions Mean Financial Suffering.

SAYS DEBTS GO UNPAID

Manchester, Eng., March 19 (A.P.).—World trade now lies under the shadow of the worst financial crisis in history. Such was the gloomy prophecy of Sir George Paish, prominent British economist, before the national free-trade conference here today.

"We are drinking and making merry," cried Sir George, "for tomorrow we die. I say with the highest authority, and I challenge anyone to deny it, that we are threatened with the greatest financial crisis the world has ever seen because the governments of the world have followed a policy of trade restriction, preventing debtors from paying their debts."

Sir George thought the peril very near at hand.

"We are face to face with this crisis. The greatest authorities in this country and in the United States expect it to come this spring, and unless this policy of safeguarding or protection is checked, it means disaster to the world. We are not trying to see a way out, we are just dancing," exclaimed the economist. "I am not exaggerating. I wish I were."

Sir George said that Germany had more unemployment than Great Britain and that the United States, "supposed to be so prosperous," counted 3,000,000 unemployed. This unemployment was only part of the greater problem of trade depression. Those who had lent money could not recover it. Hence, the world was suffering.

British bankers, who were supposed in England to be withholding credit, had never given so much, Sir George explained, but debtors could not pay because the wheels of trade were not revolving.

"I don't know how many hundreds of millions of pounds are locked up in this country," he said, "but the total must be appalling."

Sir George blamed the impending crisis on politicians who had pursued wrong policies since the war.

Plane Bremen Fitted For Shipment to U. S.

Dessau, Germany, March 19 (A.P.).—The plane Bremen, in which the late Baron von Huenfeld, Capt. Hermann Koehl and Col. James Fitzmaurice crossed the Atlantic, has been returned to the Junkers works for refitting and repacking for shipment to New York.

The plane, which had been lying at Bremerhaven awaiting transportation, was presented by the baron, its owner, to the Museum of the City of New York.

Widow Is Indicted In Spouse's Suicide

Advised Court Clerk to Kill Self, Grand Jury Holds; Accounts Short.

Elizabeth City, N. C., March 19 (A.P.).—Mrs. Emma Rogers Sawyer today was indicted for felony by the Superior Court grand jury under the charge that she "did advise, counsel, procure or command her husband, Ernest L. Sawyer, to shoot himself in the head with a pistol, from which wound he died."

The jury did not find a true bill under a bill charging murder which was sent to it yesterday.

Ernest L. Sawyer, clerk of Superior Court, killed himself December 7, following a domestic quarrel, according to testimony of Mrs. Sawyer at the inquest. She admitted at the hearing that she gave her husband the pistol with which he killed himself after he had said: "If I had a gun I would shoot myself."

She contended she had previously heard him make such threats and did not think he was serious. An audit of trust funds in custody of the clerk later revealed a shortage of about $6,000, according to county officials.

INDICTMENTS FILED AGAINST 34 IN CITY

Two Charged With Murder, Third in Manslaughter by Grand Jury.

MANY ACCUSED OF THEFT

A first-degree murder charge, one of second-degree murder and another of manslaughter were in 36 indictments reported by the District grand jury to Chief Justice Walter J. McCoy yesterday in criminal division of the District Supreme Court. The majority of the indictments were based on accusations of theft.

Accused of fatally wounding his wife Ada Dyson, with a pistol, which he later pawned, James Henry Dyson, colored, was indicted on a first-degree murder charge. The shooting took place February 18 at 1234 Six-and-a-half street northwest.

Gus Tokas, restaurant owner, was indicted on a second-degree murder charge. Last July 30, three colored men entered Tokas' restaurant, ordered food and then refused to pay for it. Tokas told police. In an argument which followed, Tokas was struck in the head with a brick by one of the men, he said. In a fury, Tokas grabbed a butcher knife and ran amuck in the street, it was charged. He was charged with fatally stabbing George Washington, colored, who was boarding a street car. The victim died October 3.

Youth Faces Manslaughter.

Manslaughter was charged against Jack Edwin Parker, 19 years old, of Beltsville, Md., in connection with the death of Mrs. H. A. Hirschberger, of Kingston, Va. She was killed by an automobile at Thomas Circle northwest on November 11, 1927. Parker was charged as driver of the car, while two other occupants, Heath Smith and William Blaine, were absolved of blame by the jury.

Abduction of Raymond L. Schwenk, ice cream truck driver, was charged in an indictment against Elmer Altizer, his wife, Sadie Altizer, and Helen Wornik. Schwenk complained that the three haled his truck last January 15 and asked him to drive them to Hyattsville, Md. After taking them to an address in the Southwest section, where they collected a quantity of clothing and piled it into the truck, he said, they were driven to Hyattsville, where one of them produced a revolver and he was forced to drive them to Penna. Grove, N. J., where they were arrested upon releasing him.

John L. Knighton, an ex-convict, was indicted for assault with a dangerous weapon. It was charged that in a fight with Lester Snyder at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest last December 12, Knighton slashed him with a penknife. Knighton recently was released from service of a fifteen-year prison sentence for robbery.

Nine Robbery Indictments.

Robbery indictments were returned against Melvin Hamilton, John Franks, Mary Johnson, Richard E. James, Florence Brown, Julia Lawson, Lewis Hodges, Benjamin Gray and Raymond Jones. A charge of embezzlement was returned against Elmer A. Brown.

Pauline Otey, Richard Duckett, Mansell Lee, Odell Jones, Daniel E. Fry and Edward Simms were indicted on assault with a dangerous weapon charges. Housebreaking and larceny were charged against Roland Washington and Hurie Williams, while Benjamin T. Marlow, George J. Resser and Theodore Roosevelt Benner were charged with grand larceny. Joy riding indictments were made against Walter Sprague, Samuel Burke, Robert West and William H. Thomas. John A. Scruggs, Jr., was charged with grand larceny and embezzlement, and John W. West with larceny after trust.

A charge of assault with a dangerous weapon was ignored against Arthur Tillman, colored. Howard University student, who fired a pistol from his home at Policeman W. I. Griggs, of the Second Precinct, whom Tillman mistook for a robber. Other cases ignored were Frederick E. Gorum, Leonard T. Wright, John E. Brownwell, Burle Williams and Edward Waldron, grand larceny; Brownwell, Williams and Waldron, housebreaking and larceny, and Garfield Dennis, assault with a dangerous weapon.

Flier Gives Fire Alarm By Circling Over Town

Shenandoah, Pa., March 19 (A.P.).—An air mail pilot flying from Cleveland to New York aroused firemen at Ringtown, 6 miles north of this city, early today by circling low over the village when he saw the Dew Drop Inn alight.

Six times he circled the village before firemen were aroused and discovered the fire, which had gained considerable headway. Seeing that he had spread an alarm, the airman continued his flight. The inn, a three-story frame structure, was destroyed.

PILOT IS ABSOLVED IN FATAL AIR CRASH

Newark Police Aid Finds No Negligence in Wreck That Cost 14 Lives.

SURVIVOR TELLS OF FALL

Newark, N. J., March 19 (A.P.).—Capt. Philip Sebald of the Newark police today announced after taking a statement from Lou Foote, pilot of the plane which crashed with a loss of fourteen lives, that no evidence of criminal negligence has been found.

Foote from his hospital bed gave an account of the fall of the plane. He said his attention was concentrated on clearing high-tension wires. He did not mention seeing the freight car into which the machine crashed.

The pilot, who has not been told that any one was killed, believed he had made a successful forced landing, authorities said.

A sister ship of the wrecked plane today was sent through some of the maneuvers of Foote's last flight by N. C. Brown. The pilot demonstrated that the ship could be handled safely with one of its three motors shut off.

Brown took off on the northeast-southwest runway with all motors roaring. After leaving the ground he shut off the starboard motor, but the ship climbed steadily. He circled the field in the same direction taken by Pilot Foote on Sunday.

Foote told police that the take-off with the fourteen passenger was heavy. He said that the port motor of the plane died when he had reached an altitude of between 400 and 500 feet more than a mile from the airport.

A woman who said she was the wife of Foote telegraphed from Turlock, Calif., asking about the flier's condition. The woman who came here with Foote as his wife was at the Park Lane Hotel today. She said that Foote had a divorced wife and 7-year-old daughter in Turlock, and that her own marriage to Foote took place in that State.

Calvin Coolidge to Buy White House Limousine

Northampton, Mass., March 19 (A.P.).—Calvin Coolidge has decided to purchase an automobile, the limousine he used during the last year of his Presidency. This was learned today when the former President met newspaper men in his law office here.

The Government furnishes the Chief Executive with a new automobile each year, disposing of the old one. The one used by Mr. Coolidge during his last year in the White House is to be brought here for his inspection. Neither he nor Mrs. Coolidge will drive the machine, however.

3 on Yacht Convicted Of Smuggling Aliens

San Juan, Porto Rico, March 19 (A.P.).—Three Massachusetts residents, Capt. Andres Velez, master; Alessio Serentino, owner, and Gordon Butler, mate of the yacht Calumet were found guilty of smuggling aliens into the United States through Porto Rico.

The men, with two other members of the crew, were arrested when the Calumet put in at an island port some time ago with a dozen aliens. Capt. Velez testified that the aliens were part of his crew and that he was forced in here by damaged machinery while en route to Martinique. The State contended that the aliens were taken aboard at Havana.

WORK ON BRIDGE Bridge Play Over WRC Is Explained

Continuing the series of "Misplayed Hands I Have Met," today's follow-up: Club, one Diamond one Spade and one Heart, falling to the game.

THE CORRECT PLAY.
To trick 2, Declarer should have led a small trump from "loose hand," winning it in the Dummy (with a small card led, West would not have played the Ace). To trick 3 Declarer should have led a small spade from Dummy East would win with the King and lead another Diamond which South would win. South then would lead the Queen of Spades and then another trump. This would be won by West, who would lead his good Diamond and then a Club. South, winning the Club with his Ace, would put North in with the third trump to lead his Ace of Spades, on which South would discard his losing Club and make gain.

As soon as the first card was led, Declarer could count one Spade, five Hearts, two Diamonds and one Club as sure; and see that, to make game, he must avoid losing one trick in each suit. Nothing could be gained (Declarer not having the Jack) by leading the King of Spades toward the Ace, but a trick can be saved by leading from the Ace of Spades toward the Queen if East has the King. If West has the King, the play does not gain but it does not lose.

INTERPRETS the MODE

An afternoon ensemble of beige georgette, cape and frock both trimmed with stitching applied in such a way as to achieve a very intricate silhouette. (Courtesy of Marial et Armand, Paris).

Mr. Work, as South, the Dealer, opened the auction with one Spade on: Spades, A, K, J, 9, 5, 3; Hearts, A, Q; Diamonds, K, Q, J; Clubs, 4, 3. Mr. Jones, West, said two Clubs on: Spades, K, 9, 6; Diamonds, A, 6, 3; Clubs, A, J, 10, 9, 7, 2. Mrs. Bisset, North, and Mr. Whitehead, East, both passed. Mrs. Bisset, North, had Spades, Q, 7, 2; Hearts, J, 10, 4; Diamonds, 10, 8, 6; Clubs, K, 8, 6, 5. Mr. Whitehead, East, held Spades, 10, 8, 6; Hearts, 7, 5, 3, 2; Diamonds, 9, 7, 4, 2; Clubs, Q, 7, 2. Mr. Work increased his own bid to two Spades, which obtained the contract, as Mr. Jones, West, was unable to continue Clubs without an assist, which his partner, Mr. Whitehead, East, was unable to give.

Opening the play, Mr. Jones, West, led the Ace of Clubs. From Mrs. Bisset's, North's hand, which became Dummy, Mr. Work, Declarer, played the 5 of Clubs. Mr. Whitehead, East, played his singleton Queen, and Mr. Work, South, Declarer, played the 3.

Mr. Jones, West, continued with the Jack of Clubs. Mr. Work realized that if he covered with Dummy's King, Mr. Whitehead, East, would trump the trick. If he did not cover, the Jack would be good. Since the trick had to be lost in either case, Mr. Work, Declarer, played Dummy's 6 of Clubs, instead of needling Mr. Whitehead, East, with the Queen of trumps.

Mr. Whitehead, East, appreciated Mr. Work's probable intention of later needling him by the King of Clubs for a discard. Therefore Mr. Whitehead considered the advisability of trumping his partner's Jack, in order to lead a Heart or Diamond through Mr. Work's hand up to Dummy's King. This would have given Mr. Jones, West, an opportunity to make a high card of one of those suits, before Mr. Work could secure the discard which he apparently would be able to make, through entry into Dummy with the Queen of trumps.

However, Mr. Whitehead was deterred from attempting this coup by two sound reasons: First, Mr. Work, South, might hold three Clubs, in which case, if Mr. Whitehead held off, the latter's partner would be able to lead a Heart or Diamond through Mr. Work's hand up to Dummy's King. Second, if Mr. Whitehead trumped the trick, he would not know whether to lead a Heart or a Diamond, as he had no basis for a decision as to the suit from which Declarer might wish to effect a discard.

Therefore Mr. Whitehead discarded on the Jack of Clubs his 2 of Diamonds. Mr. Work played the 4 of Clubs.

Mr. Jones, West, continued with the 10 of Clubs. Dummy, North, played the 8-spot. Mr. Whitehead, East, discarded the 4 of Diamonds. To have discarded the 2 of Hearts, to show weakness in that suit also, would have given valuable information to the Declarer than to Mr. Whitehead's partner. Mr. Work, Declarer, trumped with the 3 of Spades.

Mr. Work led the Ace of Spades, to which Mr. Jones followed with the 4, Dummy with the 2. Mr. Whitehead, East, discarded the 4 of Spades. Mr. Jones discarded the 9 of Hearts as an indication to his partner, Mr. Whitehead, that what he should have an opportunity. Dummy played the 7 of Spades; Mr. Whitehead, the 8. Mr. Work then led the 6 of Spades, overtaking with Dummy's King. Mr. Jones, West, discarded the 2 of Clubs; Mr. Whitehead, East, dropped his last Spade, the 10-spot.

Dummy then led the King of Clubs, giving Mr. Work, Declarer, the much-desired discard of his Queen of Hearts. Mr. Whitehead, East, discarded the 7 of Diamonds; Mr. Jones, West, played the 7 of Clubs.

Mr. Work, Declarer, then laid down his hand, conceding the Ace of Diamonds and claiming the rest of the tricks. His claim was allowed and he therefore scored four-odd on the hand, with 38 trick points, and 40 for four honors divided.

In Contract, the play of this hand was exactly the same as in Auction. The bidding, however, would be distinctly different, according to Mr. Work's analysis. There are many different systems, but in the Contract, but Mr. Work gives preference to the one which would bid three Spades on South's hand, although he recognizes that many players would bid only two.

However, by bidding three Mr. Work would make certain that his partner would jump him to four if he had a probable trick. It needs only that much in partner's hand to make a game-gone bid desirable.

Of course, for those whose two-bid forces the partner to bid, two in this case would be amply sufficient; but that is a system which, in Mr. Work's opinion, produces many losses in the long run. Mr. Work does not want to force his partner to bid with a bust hand. On the other hand, by bidding the full strength of his own hand he enables his partner to read his strength in the most satisfactory manner, thereby producing the best bid that is in two hands.

Whitehead and Drummond Are Paired With Work and Mrs. Bisset in 19th Game of Series—Bidding in Hands Analyzed.

For the nineteenth of this season's radio bridge games, which was broadcast at 4:30 o'clock yesterday from Station WRC, Mr. Work had for his partner Mrs. Clyde Bisset, a well-known bridge teacher and lecturer of Kansas City, Mo., and Mr. Whitehead was paired with C. Drummond Jones, of St. Louis, Mo., one of America's champion players.

Mr. Work, as South, the Dealer, opened the auction with one Spade on: Spades, A, K, J, 9, 5, 3; Hearts, A, Q; Diamonds, K, Q, J; Clubs, 4, 3. Mr. Jones, West, said two Clubs on: Spades, K, 9, 6; Diamonds, A, 6, 3; Clubs, A, J, 10, 9, 7, 2. Mrs. Bisset, North, and Mr. Whitehead, East, both passed. Mrs. Bisset, North, had Spades, Q, 7, 2; Hearts, J, 10, 4; Diamonds, 10, 8, 6; Clubs, K, 8, 6, 5. Mr. Whitehead, East, held Spades, 10, 8, 6; Hearts, 7, 5, 3, 2; Diamonds, 9, 7, 4, 2; Clubs, Q, 7, 2. Mr. Work increased his own bid to two Spades, which obtained the contract, as Mr. Jones, West, was unable to continue Clubs without an assist, which his partner, Mr. Whitehead, East, was unable to give.

Opening the play, Mr. Jones, West, led the Ace of Clubs. From Mrs. Bisset's, North's hand, which became Dummy, Mr. Work, Declarer, played the 5 of Clubs. Mr. Whitehead, East, played his singleton Queen, and Mr. Work, South, Declarer, played the 3.

Mr. Jones, West, continued with the Jack of Clubs. Mr. Work realized that if he covered with Dummy's King, Mr. Whitehead, East, would trump the trick. If he did not cover, the Jack would be good. Since the trick had to be lost in either case, Mr. Work, Declarer, played Dummy's 6 of Clubs, instead of needling Mr. Whitehead, East, with the Queen of trumps.

Wonders of the Microscope.

If you fill a globe with water and look through it—what will happen? If you have an empty goldfish bowl, try it and see.

Nineteen hundred years ago a Roman named Seneca wrote: "Small letters are made large when seen through a glass globe filled with water."

A "wheel animalcule" climbing the stem of a plant. (Seen through microscope.)

You do not even need a globe to try this trick. I have a glass of water on the table before me. A few moments ago I looked at a printed word "TOLEDO," holding the glass of water in front of it, rather close up. "TOLEDO" then looked at least three times as large.

To make small things look large is the idea of the "microscope." As we have an inch larger than the microscope, a glass of water is a piece of old glass, a piece of glass, a piece of glass. That is what we call a simple "lens" or microscope.

A microscope is a great deal of fun to play with. When I was in high school I put a drop of pond water on a piece of glass. Then I looked at the drop through a good microscope. What was my surprise when I saw half a dozen little creatures swimming around in that drop of water!

The teacher told me that the little swimmers were "animalcules." Whatever their name, they moved very fast. In actual size they were smaller than a pinhead, but they looked about half an inch long under the microscope. Another kind of creature found in pond water is known as the "wheel animalcule." It has a curious way of climbing a glass slide, so that when you have the help of a microscope, you can see it.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES McDONALD

DEAR MISS McDONALD: When first I read your column I was a single man, and sure got many a laugh out of your sayings. About the first time I read your page you said something I never expected any woman to say, and after that I always took a squint at your article. I guess you won't even remember, but you said that "Men married for love, and women married for money." That was the only thing he had in his favor with me. This is the answer I have for any one who says a man doesn't appreciate a woman's sacrifice.

My husband works seven nights a week with one week off during the year. He brings his pay check home to me without so much as a cent taken out. He never goes out with me. I go and come as I please. He never asks what I've done with the money, although he often tells me to buy something for myself. He doesn't get into trouble or go out with the boys. It is seldom he even takes a drink. There is one thing he does put his foot down on. He won't let me work outside my tiny apartment and "that's that."

We have a large cat, and nearly every morning he takes me for a ride before he starts. You want to know what I do for all that?

My husband gets $40 a week. I do all my own baking, even my bread, and let me tell you that is one thing my hubby is proud of. I make my own clothes. I keep my hair nice. I save his money, $20 at least goes in the bank a week, and I love him with all my heart and what more can I do?

PROUD PA.
Dear Miss McDONALD: Your column is so interesting to me and tonight after reading two letters I want to write you my experience and results. When I was 16 I had a dozen proposals of marriage. After that I lost count. I was not a flirt, my father and mother are farmers. I

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"FISCS."

If March 20 is your birthday, the best hour for you today is from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 p. m. to 6:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 2:45 p. m. to 3:30 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

The astrological influences that will prevail until the early afternoon today are stimulating, and, if you concentrate on the task that you desire most, you will acquire the accomplishment is assured. For the rest of the day conditions will be nebulous.

A child born today will very early in life acquire the habit of thinking for itself, along independent lines. It will, while original, be extremely practical, and the plans will always be workable. It will possess a ready wit, as well as a pleasing personality.

You possess many charming traits of character, but often allow them to be overshadowed by defects, which are altogether too much, and not so much in affairs of the heart, as from a sense of not being appreciated as fully as others. This provokes the sulks and suppresses the joy, and when these moods are on, you become nuisance to yourself and to every one else.

You possess exceptional intellect, and when you are normal, you shine in all social circles, by reason of your conversational ability. You are a hard worker and the most quietistic of beings, services rendered in line with this motive are valuable. When rendered because of love, they are beyond price.

You have great self-control and carry it out in the most unobtrusive manner. You are a hard worker, and when you are normal, you shine in all social circles, by reason of your conversational ability. You are a hard worker and the most quietistic of beings, services rendered in line with this motive are valuable. When rendered because of love, they are beyond price.

MANNERS.

If to be rich were to be feared, then gamblers should be feared. And ignorance and manners. By no one should be hated.

If by the swing of fortune's wheel True worth is to be reckoned, The folly then with nobler dreams To waste one's time is reckoned.

But money falls to cruel hands And sometimes falls the tender. Money that's given to the fool Creates a foolish spender.

Worth is not carried in the purse Nor counted by the penny. Who seeks to know the world's esteem Is judged from viewpoints many.

Talk as you will this world of ours Is test of a testing second. Who would by men be honored here Must cultured be and gentle.

No lasting place can money hold However bright its banners. Above the ownership of wealth The world demands good manners.

City Awarded Davis Cup Match

Canada-U. S. Winner to Meet Japanese Here May 23.

Chey Chase Named as Scene; Detroit Is Also Given Match.

NEW YORK, March 19 (A.P.).—The two Davis Cup contests to be played in the United States this season have been assigned to Washington and Detroit the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today.

After Canada and the United States meet at Montreal, May 16, 17 and 18 in the opening encounter of the American zone, the winner is to take on Japan at the Chevy Chase Club, Washington, May 24 and 25. Japan has drawn a bye in the first round as have Cuba and Mexico, the other teams in the zone.

The Mexico-Cuba match will be played in Mexico City prior to May 19, unless internal affairs make it desirable to hold it in Havana, and the winner will meet the survivor of the upper half of the draw at the Detroit Tennis Club, May 30, 31 and June 1.

This final match deciding the American zone championship is to be between Mexico or Cuba on the one hand and the United States, Canada or Japan on the other.

Neither Tilden nor Hunter to play in American zone.

Should the United States Team fulfill expectations and win the zone competition, the players will sail for Europe the second week of June, which will enable them to reach England in time to compete in the British championships at Wimbledon.

Francis T. Hunter announced some time ago that neither he nor Bill Tilden would be available for the American zone play as they are scheduled to sail for European play within the next few weeks, and this was verified today by the association which announced that "George Lott, John Van Ryn, Wilmer Allison, John Hennessy and several others yet to be named" will make up the squad.

The award of one of the two Davis Cup tennis contests to be held in this country this year to the Chevy Chase Club comes as a climax to many years of effort on the part of local tennis leaders to bring the classic tennis matches here for the first time.

Lawrence A. Baker, chairman of the Chevy Chase Club tennis committee, was in New York yesterday furthering the bid of the local club for the match.

Capacity Throng Watches Grays Win in Feature of The Post's Court Tourney

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY GYMNASIUM rang with the shouts of a capacity gathering of basketball fans last night as the South Atlantic A. U. tournament, staged by The Washington Post, hit its high spot of the past ten days in a wild carnival of games that witnessed the elimination of 6 more of the 69 teams seeking titles and the survival of the defending champions in the unlimited class.

Playing on a court banked high with fans taking every available space in the gymnasium including the rafters, the champion United Typewriter Grays erased a formidable unlimited title contender by decisively beating the Potomac Boat Club Quintet in the feature contest of the evening.

Last night's program, occupied chiefly by Jewish Community Center teams, saw two of Coach Manny Goldfarb's quintets eliminated from contention, with the victory of the unlimited five over Company F of Hyattsville offsetting the defeat of the 115-pounders by the Aztecs. The J. C. C. 100-pounders provided the major upset of the tournament to date by breaking the 23-game winning streak of the Y. M. C. A. Aztecs. Goldfarb's 145-pounders, however, fell before the brilliant play of the Brentwood Hawks, now the outstanding favorite for the title in their class.

Quantico Marines and Woltz Clash in Feature Tonight.

The Curtin Wonders established themselves as the favorites to win the 130-pound title with a decisive victory over the Westerners, one of the formidable entrants in the class.

Tonight's program, comprised of five games, has been changed to start at 6 o'clock due to the inability of the Grays to meet their scheduled opponent in the second round.

The feature game will bring together the crack Quantico Marines and the Woltz Photographers in the unlimited class.

The Curtin Wonders, who played their tournament, will be making their debut in the tourney tonight.

J. C. C. Unlimiteds in Victory Over Company F Quintet.

The Jewish Community Center's crack team moved up a notch in the unlimited class at the expense of the Company F team, of the Hyattsville National Guards, winning 44-28, in a game which was as hard-fought as any in the tournament. The J. C. C. five after being given a point-for-point battle in the first quarter stepped out in the second period and had a 24-12 advantage at the half.

Throughout the third period, the Grays managed to stay within 10 points of their rivals but with Russ Vincent, star center, ruled out on personal fouls dropped out of the running in the final quarter.

The Grays kept fighting until the final whistle but could not match the teamwork of the J. C. C. Five plus the individual efforts of Jake Goldblatt, Tech High star. Goldblatt made six field goals and six fouls. Kramer was close behind in scoring.

Wanley, who was playing his first real game since he injured his foot, put up a brilliant game for the Grays. He shot the spotlight with Wright and Cohen.

Champions Amass Early Lead To Eliminate Boatmen.

Replaying the same brilliant form which characterized their performance all year, the title-defending United Typewriter Co. Grays won over the Potomac Boat Club Quintet, 32 to 23, in the unlimited class. The victory advanced the Grays into the third round.

Grays simply outclassed their opponents last night. Although they did not ring up an overwhelming score, they amassed a wide enough advantage to coast along easily. At the end of the first quarter they were ahead, 12 to 1, while at the half they led, 20 to 5.

The Boatmen came up to 27 by the end of the third quarter, but were unable to get any closer because of the Grays' early lead. All of the Grays depended on Russell Vincent, who led the team with 18 points. Lilly and Smith were the most consistent.

J. C. C. 145-Pounders Bow to Flashy Brentwood Hawks.

The Brentwood Hawks joined the Jewish Community Center basketballers, 38 to 25, in the 145-pound class. The game was the fastest and most exciting of the evening.

The lead changed hands five times in the first half, with action furious throughout. The Hawks led, 13 to 7, at the end of the first quarter, mainly through some exceptional playing by Wanley, while they led but 15 to 14 at the half, so stubborn did the J. C. C. 80 fast was the action during this time that three players were forced to leave the fray because of too many personal fouls committed. Hirsch was the offender for the J. C. C., while Hook and Weigel were the overzealous players for the Hawks.

Wanley was the outstanding player of the game, while Cappelli, Vincent, who was playing his first real game since he injured his foot, put up a brilliant game for the Grays. He shot the spotlight with Wright and Cohen.

CAPITAL FIRMEN TO PROTEST LEADER AT RICHMOND

Bitunyac Not Eligible Is Claim

Not Officially Entered in National Tourney, Is Charge.

Leads in Singles and Doubles; 2 District Teams Scheduled.

PROMINENT members of Washington's duckpin fraternity are preparing to register protests to officials of the National Duckpin Congress that has as its aim the ousting from the tournament at Richmond, Va., of "Boss" Bitunyac, of Pittsburgh, who now holds the lead in the singles event and is on the leading doubles team.

Washington bowlers, who are considered among the strongest contenders for prizes in the second annual national tournament, charge that Bitunyac is ineligible to compete according to the rules of the congress and that he should not be permitted to roll with a Baltimore team this week, as announced at Richmond.

Bitunyac was not entered officially in the tourney, the local leaders declare. His appearance on the opening night's program came as a complete surprise, especially after he had stated that he was going to Baltimore to team with a Richmond bowler to take the lead in doubles competition.

Pittsburgh Needs Only 338 Set to Shatter Record.
Now that he has prospects of coping with the all-events crown held by Howard Campbell, the Giant Austrian plans to align with a Baltimore team the latter part of the week. He needs but 338 in his final set to wipe up a new all-events mark and perhaps collect the lion's share of the prize money.

The Pittsburgher is generally rated a professional in bowling circles, although Maxie Rosenberg, Jack Whalen and other local stars gave him a severe beating at Convention Hall in 1928. It is not the fact that Bitunyac is rated a professional that prompts the protest.

It is probable that the protest will be carried to the duckpin organization whether Bitunyac rolls with a Baltimore team or not.

Lonnie Kraus and Harry Hiss will lead teams to Richmond tonight to seek national honors. Kraus has collected several of the outstanding bowlers who patronize the Coliseum to comprise one team, and Walter Muir has gathered another five composed entirely of veteran players of the same establishment. Bitunyac is expected to team with Kraus, who has a high-scoring combination to represent the Bethesda alleys. Ken Thorpe, H. Newman, Norman Schroeder, C. Mulvey, C. Heston and Joe Deibel are to roll singles and doubles this afternoon.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

MR. TWITCHELL ON THE MARKET.
New York, March 19.—"Well, the stock market again hopped off without me," declared Elmer Twitchell today, "but I have learned my lesson. The next time the Federal Reserve Board issues a warning I am going to leap right into the market and lead up!"

"I know the system now. If I play it I can't lose. It's this: you just watch for these things:
First—A statement by Col. Ayres that stock are too high and that a big break is near.
Second—Market letters stating that a technical readjustment is necessary and urging caution.
Third—Widely circulated reports that the discount rate, whatever that is, is to be raised."

"When these things happen they are pretty good signs that stocks are going to another ride. Then is the time to pick out a few stocks, fill the fountain pen and get the checkbook ready for action. There is only one more thing to wait for. That's the Federal Reserve bank warning against speculation."

"You never have to wait long, and when you get it you can take it as an infallible sign that the market is about ready to set a new altitude record. That is the time to buy stocks, but if you have a timid nature you can wait a couple of hours for a development that will clinch everything. That will be a statement from Secretary Mellon."

"All you really need to wait for is the Federal Reserve Board warning, and you can judge how big the rise will be by the tone of the warning. If it is just a mild warning, stocks may not go up more than 30 or 40 points, but if it is a red-hot warning full of strong language you can bet your shirt that 100 points can be made in anything."

"The statement from Mr. Mellon has become superfluous and is not needed except by the scary traders who want everything guaranteed. Still, it is yours if you want it."
"I will not be caught again. I understand there are two factions in the F. R. B. One is for issuing the warnings only twice a month, but the other faction is for issuing them every day except Sunday and holidays and by telephone, letter and postcard. I am for the second faction. The more warnings the bigger the market, and no joking."

EYE EXERCISE

Failing eyesight can be restored by proper exercise of the eye muscles, the New York State Optometric Society says. If the eyes don't get enough exercise on our streets these days they never will.

The amount of setting-up exercises that a trail eye can get in the subway is positively bewildering.

Moving pictures that think are now being perfected, and after that something may be done about making producers, directors and film stars do as much.

THE MARKET

Customer (excitedly on telephone): Is it true that Secretary Mellon issued a statement saying that now is the time to buy bonds?
Broker: Yes, sir.
Customer: There's no doubt about it?
Broker: None at all.
Customer: Well, put me aboard a dozen stocks right away!

YOUR BOY AND YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.
The Parent Counselor.

Successful Failures.

Put as my epitaph: "Has lived and accomplished nothing."
This was an item in the will of a man long known as a successful merchant.

Quite naturally these words, coming as they did from a man who apparently had conducted a highly successful business for years, created a sensation in his community.

The wife explained: "It is my store 46d has been for 29 years. My husband signed the checks. He never had much patience for business. My husband liked to invent things to give and to love his grandchildren. He made our home happy."

"And this man wants the world to know that he lived and accomplished nothing."

"But he was a successful failure, and more power to folks like him. He had a hobby. He was well informed. He loved children and he made his home happy."

Remember that tribute from his wife—he made his home happy.

He knew how to use his leisure. He knew enough to let his family live in peace, and when he died his wife said: "For 40 years I've lived with him and you can't say there isn't something there after all this time."

"I have sat in chairs at hundreds of high schools and colleges and have yet to hear a speaker say one word about successful failures. The emphasis is all on money, get there, head—the success and 'how he started as a newsboy and ended as a millionaire.'"

"What a crude appraisal of life's values."

Not a word about Thomas Aquinas, Agassiz, Grenfell, Bullfinch, Lanier, Thoreau, Payfe, De Vinci, Darnowski, Trudeau, Marquette, Kossuth, Gutenberg, Garibaldi, Loyola, Pabre, Virchow.

None of these cared about money. They saw the bigger things in life.

Very likely these names are not known to boys and girls. But don't blame them for not knowing the great scientists, writers, saints, musicians, revolutionists, naturalists and architects. They haven't been taught about these men who sometimes failed in succeeding and who yet succeeded in their failing.

Why are you older than me blind as to the innermost feelings and ambitions of youth in your constant emphasis upon the point that success means dollars and doughnuts, houses and horses, landaus and ladies?

I can not include myself, because after after letter comes to this desk from youth who loves nature and wants to find a field of vocational service, who loves children and wants to teach, who loves the drama and wants to act, who loves music and wants to sing, who loves poetry and wants to write.

Youth dreams. It would know nature and man, as did Thoreau. It would build lasting bulfinch fronts. It would explore upward and downward. It would design like Phytie, be appreciated as Darnowski, sing in verse like Lanier, be esteemed like Aquinas, explore and serve like Grenfell and lead like Kossuth.

Youth is inspired. It sits before us hungry for great thoughts and ideals of great people. We hand it dollar signs, furs, static and gasoline and then wonder why it seeks self-expression along unwise lines.

What have we done to encourage self-expression in good ways?

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.
Backward and Has a Car.

Although I have a coupe I have never gone with any girl. I earned the car. I have ability to pick up boy friends, but when it comes to females I fall back. I don't know what to do. Girls often way to me that I never pick them up because I think it is a bad idea.

My mother and I have drifted apart, although we really like each other immensely. We have not kissed each other for the last two years. I have not attended church for a long and I haven't the nerve to go now.

Answer—You are a lucky boy—nice mother, capacity to earn money, a coupe and "backwardness toward females." Next Sunday why not fill the second seat with your mother and go to church? A little more real service shown your mother might give you some practice in getting rid of this "female backwardness."

A Recommendation, Indeed.
As a P. T. A. president I constantly refer in my talks to "Your Boy and Your Girl" articles. In parental education you are rendering a very real service, for you are assisting those who have immediate problems, and you are helping to bring about a mutual understanding between parent and child. The direct help you give to young people is splendid.

Answer—Thus the lady sizes up the ideal behind my service.

Just what problem faces you, father or mother, boy or girl? Please write it out, and do not use a lot of words, because it takes a long time to read a long letter. Send it to me and just see if one of the solutions isn't Johnny-on-the-spot.
